Be Represented by Booths
In Gymnasium.

Final plans for the PTA Bazaar to be held at the Oceana High School for three nights next week, November 6, 7 and 8, were completed at a meeting of the organization held early this week. Reports submitted by the committee leaders indicated that all is in readiness for what promises to be the most successful event held under Parent-Teachers' Association sponsorship in the county.

It is anticipated that the attendance figure of 1,500 visitors last year will be increased materially during this season's bazaar. Exhibits and entertainment features are more comprehensive and elaborate than ever before, and interest in the celebration is running high.

Entertainment Features

Entertainment features for the three-night activity will include a fashion show for children on the opening night, sponsored by the Cinderella Baby Shoppe. Contestants for this principal attraction of the night will be children under fourteen years of age, who will be selected from the community served by the school. Music for this feature will be furnished by the rhythm orchestra of the school, composed of primary students.

On the second evening, an amateur program is scheduled, to be participated in by any and all county residents who believe they have a special talent for entertainment. All are invited to participate in this feature. Prizes will be awarded the winners and the audience will serve as judge and jury.

Fashion Show

For the final evening's program, a fashion show for ladies and misses will be staged by the Lerner Shop. Models will display the latest in gowns for all occasions, morning, afternoon and night. The participants in this feature will be high school girls and other young ladies of the school community.

Aunt Fannie Perkins Is Feted By Church On 90th Birthday

One of County's Oldest Residents Is Recipient of Birthday Party at London Bridge Social Hall; Many Ladies Attend Celebration.

Honoring one of the county's oldest and best loved residents, a delightful birthday party was held last Tuesday afternoon in the social hall of the London Bridge Baptist Church for Mrs. Fannie Perkins, of Lynnhaven, ninety years old on that day. The party was sponsored by the Marjorie Shumate Circle of the W. M. U.

After devotional exercises consisting of the singing of the guest's favorite hymns and prayer by the Rev. W. J. Meade, a musical and literary program was presented.

Mrs. Charles Spence and Mrs. Fred Shaffer sang a variety of solo and duets and Mrs. Eunice James played a piano solo.

Pasteer Speaks

The Rev. Meade delivered a brief but appropriate congratulatory talk, in which he spoke of the splendid character of Mrs. Perkins and of her contributions through these many years to the London Bridge Church and to the community.

Following the program, a happy social hour was enjoyed, during which a large birthday cake, illuminated by ninety candles, was presented to Mrs. Perkins by the Ann Judson Circle of the W. M. U. Many additional gifts were presented to "Aunt Fannie."

Five Ladies Present

About fifty ladies were present. Special guests included Mrs. Ruth James, Mrs. T. B. Godfrey, Mrs. G. W. Reader, Mrs. S. W. Wood, Mrs. Bettie Davis and Mrs. Ida Mae.

Mrs. Perkins is one of the oldest residents in this section of Virginia, where the greatest part of her ninety years have been spent. She expressed herself as very pleased with the attentions shown her at this gala birthday party.

Hallowe'en colors and decorations were used in the hall and were displayed by the Girl Scouts of London Bridge as their contribution to the celebration.

COUNTY GARDENS SHOW BIG GAINS

Mrs. Phillips' Report Reveals Great Interest in Canning Vegetables.

Showing a substantial increase of fifty per cent in the number of subsistence gardens established in the county during the past year over the previous season's efforts. Mrs. Mary E. Phillips, garden supervisor for Princess Anne county, this week turned in her interesting final report to the board of supervisors. Two hundred and twenty-five gardens, divided evenly between white and colored families and embracing a total of 1,001 persons, dotted the county because of Mrs. Phillips' activity, assisted by her colored aide, Mrs. Georgia E. Roberts.

Sponsored by Federal Funds

The garden program, sponsored by Federal agencies and paid for by Federal funds, sought a three-fold accomplishment, the education of relief families to the value of subsistence gardens, knowledge and means of creating balanced diets and the establishment of a feeling of self-reliance and independence on the part of the gardeners. The success of this program is to be read into the results accomplished to date.

Since the beginning of the program on March 8 of this year and not including those crops now being harvested or still in the ground 181 families of the 225 subsistence gardeners have used food preservation methods, drying 668 pounds of vegetables for winter use. Some 1,542 bushels of vegetables have been stored raw, not including sweet potatoes now being harvested, and 12,054 quarts of canned goods are now on the shelves of these homes, including almost every variety of fruit and vegetable produced in the gardens as well as many combinations such as succotash and soup mixtures.

Six Quarts Smallest Amount

Six quarts is the smallest amount canned by any one of these families, and 317 quarts represent the greatest amount of food produced by the individual subsistence gardener.

In all, 110 acres were planted in spring and summer gardens, while 89 acres have been given over to fall and winter plantings by 18 families. These gardens include collards, rutabagas, turnips, mustard and sweet potatoes, all of which indicate a good yield.

The gardens, Mrs. Phillips reported, are considerably improved over those of last year. This situation she attributes to two reasons, and to the unusually favorable seasons and to the fact that the gardeners paid for their own supplies, the latter condition stimulating interest which expressed itself in the attention given to the gardens and to greater production.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL UNDER WAY

Membership Drive Begins Today; Increase Sought Over Last Year.

JOIN

The annual Red Cross roll call in Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach gets under way today with the slogan determined to raise a substantial sum above that collected last year. The campaign will continue through Thanksgiving Day, but it is the hope of the officers that most of the campaigning can be accomplished within the first week of the drive.

In the 1934 roll call, membership totalling $300.82 were submitted in the county, with Virginia Beach contributing an additional $15.15.

New County Chairman

The monthly meeting held Tuesday at Princess Anne Court House, the resignation of Mrs. Russell Dyer, of Virginia Beach, was accepted as county chairman and Mrs. B. A. Dixson, of the Court House, was appointed to her position. Previously, Mrs. Dixon had served as vice-chairman of the group. F. A. Cox was appointed home, farm and accident prevention chairman.

It was pointed out that among other activities participated in by the Red Cross during the month of October, $134.66 was expended upon the purchase of milk for children in the county, and $48.71 for food, medicines and clothing.

In addition, a little boy who was knocked down by an automobile several weeks ago when on his way home from school and severely injured also is being cared for by the county chapter.

At the Tuesday meeting, an appropriation was made to purchase material for the making of garments for needy children and to replenish the five layette kits now being used in the five districts of Princess Anne.

The NEWS bespeaks strong public support on the part of all county residents for the Red Cross. Invaluable is the work being done here by its agencies, and the movement is deserving of substantial recognition by the general public.

New WPA Organization Begins To Function In County; Greater Work Relief Program Is Ready

Committee Named to Draw Plans For Addition to County Clerk's Building.

COST TO COUNTY VIEWED LESS THAN PREVIOUSLY

Hope Is Expressed That Construction Can Begin On Needed Offices Soon.

Confirming local opinion that both building plans and estimated costs on the proposed second floor addition to the present county clerk's office at Princess Anne, as outlined in his memorandum of last week, were far out of line, Col. M. A. Butler, Public Works Administration head of the Second Congressional District, last Monday turned further action on the project over to the board of supervisors, after stating that the Federal government's share of $6,920 had been definitely set aside for delivery in the near future.

Exception had been taken to the imposition of a total cost of $4,217 on the county, which contrasted unfavorably with the maximum of $2,500 set aside for the project by the board at its August meeting. Col. Butler admitted that his figures were not to be accepted as authentic, adding that "this project summary—that reported in these columns last week—should never have been sent on to you."

Committee to Draw Plans

As the matter now stands, a committee composed of W. R. Payne, supervisor from Lynnhaven District, H. W. Ozlin, county agricultural agent, and F. W. Dunn, new branch manager of the WPA program for the county, will draw up a working plan and materials' guide to be submitted at an early date to Col. Butler for forwarding to Washington. It is believed that construction work can be begun as soon as such action is taken (Continued on Page Five)

SEWING ROOMS' FUND APPROVED

Supervisors Vote Assistance; No Action Taken On Kings Daughters Plea.

The county's three sewing rooms, two of which have been closed during the past two months because of sufficient work for women in the truck fields, will run at full speed under FERA supervision until the project is taken over by the WPA. Mrs. Helen Haggard, district supervisor of women's work for Federal relief agencies, told the board of supervisors this week.

It is expected that the change to the permanent relief agency will be effected before the first of the new year. Mrs. Haggard stated.

Corn harvest was completed in the fall, and the crop was estimated to be 100,000 bushels.

Last year, only $11,000,000 was loaned at 55 cents a bushel. The small amount was attributed to crop shortage.

Additional information on the terms of the four-year contracts and the increased production of hogs to be allowed will be furnished in a short time, AAA officials stated this week, obviously pleased by the gratifying support accorded their program by the nation's farmers.

Card Party Planned

The Woman's Aid Auxiliary of the Princess Anne Medical Society will sponsor a benefit card party at the Princess Anne Woman's Club, Virginia Beach, Wednesday, November 20, at 2:30 o'clock. The public is urged to attend the affair given in the interest of county relief work.

Pier Specifications Given By Council

F. W. Dunn Heads Sectional Activity; Bryant in Charge Of County Office.

125 MEN GIVEN STEADY JOBS ON INSECT CONTROL

Relief Expenses to County Lightened by Assumption Of Work by New Agency.

Princess Anne county's new Works Progress Administration status swung into action last Friday morning, the Federal government's latest venture in the field of local relief. With the temporary exceptions of the transient camp and the sewing room projects, all Federal relief agencies operating in the county now are controlled by WPA, which supplants, among former alphabetical agencies, CWA, VERA, PERA, WPA, the latter still functioning but not in this county.

F. D. Dunn, former project supervisor for the City of Norfolk, has been selected by Col. M. A. Butler as general manager for Princess Anne county, part of Norfolk county and the city of Portsmouth. He will be in charge of the initiation of all projects under WPA and their conduct during the time of operation. Mr. Dunn comes to his new post highly recommended, particularly for his knowledge of building materials and the details of construction.

Bryant Project Head

Directly under him, and serving as project superintendent for an area project, is WPA activity, Mr. G. S. Bryant, formerly assignment officer for PERA projects in the county. Mr. Bryant will be in charge of all employment activity and will direct the relief workers to those assignments approved within the county.

H. A. Burmeister, of East Coast View, has been appointed senior clerk at the Princess Anne office. Vernon Etheridge, of Creeds, will serve as top foreman for the WPA group, and Frank Hughes, of Blackwater, has been named supervisor. Other foremen are now on the job are Henry Turner, of Thomas' Corner, in Kempville District; J. N. Burton, of Princess Anne Court House, in Seaboard District; Vane Pine, of Mundis, in Fungo District, and Walter Gallop, of Seatack, in Lynnhaven District.

125 Men Employed

An approximate 125 men, all of those on the county rolls classified as unskilled labor able to work on such projects, have been put to work on malarial control activities, now being engaged in all five districts of the county. This agency-wide drainage project has been taken over from former PERA.

"THE VOICE of a majority, swaying the course of government does not insure good government except it be the voice of a well-informed and well-intentioned people."

GARDENS AND RELIEF

John Chinaman, though he live in a veritable beehive of humanity constantly beset by war, flood, drought and other implacable enemies of man, yet manages to maintain his celestial dignity and a full stomach without the aid of governmental assistance, thanks to his small garden plot and its annual harvest of rice and vegetables. His life is not an easy one, but that tiny spot of garden saves him from the indignities and the suffering that accompany a condition of starvation.

America's relief directors might learn a valuable lesson from John Chinaman. If, instead of pouring uncounted millions of dollars into wasteful and ill-advised relief channels, local directors of the vast governmental program had bussed themselves with the procuring of unused land for relief gardens and supplied the unemployed with the seeds and simple tools needed to work them, we would not today be facing a staggering public debt which brings a staggering headache whenever it is considered.

We do not mean that such a simple remedy would have solved our problems in their entirety, but we do believe that much needless suffering and many dollars would have been saved by such a course. Barring the unique situation presented by the big city, where land is not to be had in sufficient quantities to satisfy the demands of all unemployed, each individual community could have found enough suitable ground to give to each family on relief sufficient space to raise all of the vegetables it could eat during the summer and enough of a surplus which when canned would have carried them over a good part of the winter.

Then, with the distribution of enough money to insure suitable quantities of meat and sufficient funds for needed clothing, the unemployed would be today a far happier and healthier lot, and government could truly say that it had done a good job and a big one well. Alas, not even a governmental program of relief can be expected to follow the simplest and safest course of action.

Consider the psychological effects of turning a vast part of our idle population back to the soil, even in such a circumscribed way as we have advocated. The very process of raising a good garden crop challenges the ingenuity of the individual and brings him a sense of well-being as he surmounts each difficulty. It tends to make the individual self-reliant and it would restore to him some of the independence of feeling which bitter contact with depression has taken from him. Not all men would make good gardeners, but we have every confidence that such a program would have shown amazing results.

Here in Princess Anne, as in other small sections of the country where the subsistence garden project has been lodged in competent and sympathetic hands, we have seen an amazing change in the status of the gardeners after a season of effort in their small plots. The revival of hope, courage and ambition they have taken from the mass of growing things about them is apparent in the very fact that they edition continue on the relief rolls. Somehow, as though by magic, that revival of faith has carried them on and they have found satisfactory jobs, taking up their places in the workaday world as useful, happy citizens no longer burdened by the disillusionment of relief.

"No gardens, no relief" would have been an ideal slogan for the relief forces as they began their tasks of battling poverty and want. The lazy and the shiftless may have grumbled at the order, but their families would have profited from their enforced stay in the garden plots, and health standards today would be considerably higher than statistics show them to be.

It is not yet too late to reform the relief lines, and we can only hope that some farsighted government executive will be led to see the value of such a program and its inspiring effect upon those whom it is proffered.

HOSPITALIZATION AND THE AVERAGE MAN

In a forceful plea made to the county board of supervisors this week by an interested officer of the Kings Daughters clinical service, it was pointed out that while revenues for this worthy charity have decreased by almost one-half in the past five years, the demands made for medical and maternity attention and assistance have increased tremendously. However because of the wide difference between income and expenditure, the clinic now faces the possibility of forced curtailment of its services unless civic contributions are materially augmented for the coming year.

Princess Anne county has contributed a customary $150 to the Kings Daughters clinic annually for several years, but this small sum could not begin to pay for the medical attention given to residents of the county by the skilled doctors and obstetricians associated with this most efficient charity. Nor can the organization accomplish the results it desires in the county without a material increase in the county's apportionment.

Many of the women and children treated at the Norfolk clinic from this county would have been forced to forego such medical assistance if its services were not available, because of a lack of money to pay necessary hospitalization bills. Its services have ranged from pre-natal instruction to the treatment of social diseases and only those familiar with its non-advertised activity in behalf of better health conditions in this county can have any inkling of the great good it is doing.

Standards of health in Princess Anne are alarmingly low, and the need for such clinics that operated by the Kings Daughters is so great as to demand continuation if those standards ever are to be raised. The average man, in these days of stress, must look to agencies other than those which demand payment in advance before needed attention is given, and we cannot believe that the county officials will be so indifferent to the plight of our people as to deny the humane request made for an increase in the county's subscription.

We cannot stress too strongly the valuable work being done in health circles by the Kings Daughters, the Woman's Club and the Medical Auxiliary. All are needed, surely needed, and it is the duty of each person able to offer assistance to cooperate with them to the fullest extent possible.

Through such channels as these, the underprivileged residents of the county may hope to attain a decent, healthful standard of living.

AUTUMN AT THE SEASIDE

To those of us who have known Virginia's seashore only during the hectic days of mid-summer, the restfulness and quiet charm to be found at the water's edge during these idyllic fall days come as a pleasant and satisfying surprise. We have traversed the length of the ocean walkway and wandered over the sands many times in recent weeks, and, we confess, we know of no locale more provocative of utter contentment and more suitable for the rational working out of one's individual problems.

The very timelessness of wind and wave and sand and the ordered planes on which they move bring their own explanations of an ordered universe, and the current perplexities that arise to confront us at every turn seem to fade into insignificance as we contemplate the surging tide and its regular rise and fall against the shore.

Here, at the meeting place of nature's opposing forces, we lose our small selves in the grandeur and the beauty of the surrounding scene.

The air is soft and refreshing, and the breeze blowing from the east bring memories of a gallant band of colonists led by Captain John Smith, hardy pioneers seeking a new habitat in the trackless wilderness. To trace some bit of the amazing history of the development of this nation from those early, uncertain days to the present brings a new belief in the grandeur that lies in man and a reaffirmation of faith in the ultimate destiny of the nation. Depressions may sweep over the land as winds over the sea, but, when the fury has subsided, there are great periods of calm when man resumes his march of progress to the culmination of his ideal.

Time marches on, and new generations appear to take the place of those that are gone, each contributing something to our understanding of life and to our appreciation of living. A sense of timelessness hangs over all, and, as our ego permits us to visualize man as a cooperative being, a grain of sand or a drop of water contributing to the creation of mighty beaches and giant seas, we grasp some tiny knowledge of the purposes of existence. There is an essence of peace in such discoveries, a finer appreciation of our individual lives and of the parts we play in the advancement of the universe.

Yes, one cannot walk at the water's edge at this season of the year without indulging in a bit of philosophy, the cheerful tone of which is quite in contrast to the depressing experiences so frequently found in our daily routines.

WANDERERS

How can those people who have sailed the seas
To watch deep skies and overwhelming moon
Shining serene on ancient distant quays,
Or drifted leisurely through some lagoon;
And seen the Southern Cross o'er phosphorous foam
Trailing along behind the ship's white wake
How can these people long for loves at home
While watching flying fishes water break?

Those who have sailed full-rigged
the surging seas—
Have glimpsed into the wonder of it all—
There is a soul which cannot know true ease.

Always the lure for them to roam shall call.

How can those people who have sailed the seas
Ever be soled by a landsman's breath?

CLOUDY DAY

It is true that, older than man and ages to outlast him, the Pacific surf
Still cheerfully pounds the worn granite drum,

But there's no storm: and the birds are still, no song; no kind of excess;

Nothing that shines, nothing is dark;

There is neither joy nor grief nor a person, the sun's tooth sheathed in cloud,

And life has no more desires than a stone.

The stormy conditions of time and change are all abrogated, the essential

Violence of survival, pleasure,

Love, wrath and pain, and the curious desire of knowing, all perfectly suspended.

In the cloudy light, in the timeless quietness,

One explores deeper, than the nerves or heart of nature, the womb or soul,

To the bone, the careless white bone, the excellence.

SPHERICITY

Reindrops, dewdrops, tears,
And the moon are spheres;
The circumference of trees.
Bellies of bees,
Oranges and grapes,
Heads of men and apes.
All resemble spheres.

It is man who dares
Make triangles and squares

To show how he might star
The roundness of a star;
Yet in the end he must Turn to spheres of dust;

For nothing can defeat
Sphereicity of space.

DEMOCRACY MOVES AHEAD

No common word in our language has been more misused or misinterpreted by the demagogues than democracy, which in its essential meaning implies an equality of opportunity for the individual as well as for the lumping of men of a given status into a regimen of class and considering their problems from the standpoint of mass.

The phenomena of dictatorships in modern Europe and the emphasis upon socialism rather than democracy are readily understandable when we consider the social history of Europe and its constant reiteration of the class principle. Individualism there has had little encouragement, for men have been taught to think and to act, when they have been permitted any freedom to think and act, not as individuals but as members of a certain strata of society, from which it has been practically impossible to free themselves.

True it is that individuals have been found who have stated their theses and boldly held their ground in the face of official denunciations, but the atmosphere has never been such as to permit an unhampered growth of individualism on the part of the ordinary citizen. Even today the average European feels the need of a protection from those whom he has been told are his superiors, and it is from such a seed that springs the why and wherefore of the Hitlerites, Mussolinis and Stalins, whatever may be the name of the government under which they operate.

Although we in America have a common origin with our blood cousins of Europe, the soil of the New World has been particularly hospitable to theories of individualism. In the early days of our nation, which was founded by those who chafed under the restrictions of class and who sought an outlet for their own beliefs, the rigors of clearing the wilderness and the sparsity of population made necessary endorsement of the doctrine of individual action, for to depend upon any other practice for the surety of existence might well have meant extinction at the hands of the hostile forces here found.

These doctrines became a part of the very makeup of the American people, and it is quite understandable that they should be given first prominence in the Constitution and in the varied traditions which welded together into a solid body politic the population of the individual colonies. Without our being aware at all times of this individualistic trend, each succeeding generation has reaffirmed its hearty belief in the value of man as a unit rather than as a mere cog in a large group.

Such a doctrine may be too idealistic in its nature to hope for continued life, but education and experience slowly are bringing to all men a definite understanding of true government. Prolonged adversity is reaffirming the credo that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and we are coming to realize, in spite of all the shibboleths which are being advanced by those not in sympathy with basic democracy, that the common good is the best for everybody. Man may be, as is charged by the cynic, aspiring to the stars, but we believe that old feet are firmly planted in good old earth.

It is but natural that the charge of socialism should be hurled at such a credo as this, but careful consideration of the ideal of democracy which was fashioned more than 150 years ago will reveal that this is but the application of the democracy to which we supposedly subscribe. Government has no higher duty than to protect the individuals who compose it, the weak from the strong and the strong from the unscrupulous.

It is our thought that democracy is moving ahead, despite the countermeasures and inadequacies of treatment by friends and enemies alike. Out of the present confusion may be expected to come a clearer and saner interpretation of the functions of government with relation to the people whom it serves. That interpretation may differ on certain essential points with former practice, but experience and changing conditions have brought newer remedies for old problems, and our democracy will march ahead, remaining democratic in spite of all the blandishments of dictatorship and its counterpart of anarchy.

As might be expected from such a setup, the demagogue was quick to adapt this almost fanatic belief in the opportunity and equality of the individual to his own use. Not so far removed from our European cousins and their reliance upon authority as to see clearly through his nefarious schemes, we have been prone to accept his mouthings of false standards and to embrace in practice—while holding to the theory of individualism—his program of actual class regimentation. We have seen the wholesale negation of basic democratic ideology by men who would not accept its tenets, the while they plausibly chanted of rugged individualism and talked of the right of individual expression and the property of sharing the wealth accruing under our democracy according to the talents of the individual. We have seen these men take unto themselves the prerogatives of a ruling class—socially and economically, if not always politically—and we have witnessed their efforts through the compliant policies to enhance their position by the inauguration of a class program.

So long as the nation moved along smoothly on its course and all men willing to work could secure sufficient return to insure at least minimum protection for themselves and their families, the average citizen thought little of the changes to which he was being subjected. But, when came a time of prolonged depression and the opportunity for consideration of just what was going on, that instinctive belief in a real democracy came to the fore, with the result that today men are clamoring for a variety of curbs and checks on those who sought to mould them for their own uses.

For the time being, here are few random thoughts selected from his writings, all taken from the Jeffersonian Cyclopedia, edited by John F. Poyk and entitled A Comprehensive Collection of the Views of Thomas Jefferson:

"There are rights which it is useless to surrender to the government, and which governments have yet always been found to invade. Among these are the rights of thinking, and publishing our thoughts by speaking or writing."

"Our exports to Italy have exceeded those of other nations, and are now at stake unnecessarily . . .

"To David Humphreys, III, 13,

Ford Ed., V, 50 (9.1765) Page 306, paragraph 3236.

"Reply to address, VIII, 120 (1865) Page 306, paragraph 3234.

"Differences of opinion, when permitted . . . to purify themselves by free discussion, are but as . . . clouds overspreading our land transparently, and leaving our horizon more bright and serene."—To Benjamin Waring, IV, 276, (W.M. 1911) Page 306, paragraph 3235.

"For we should wonder at . . . the pressure (for a fixed Constitution in 1785-89) when we consider the monstrous abuses of power under which . . . the French people were ground to powder; when we pass in review the shackles on the freedom of thought and of speech."—Autobiography, I, 86.

surplus and the boys more than she sells us on balance."

"All this is probably quite true, and it just goes to remind us that peace, like every other blessing attainable by man, has its price."

"For the one thing that ought to be clear, in any discussion of neutrality legislation, is this: we can keep our skirts clear and avoid the danger of being drawn into a foreign war, or we can make hay while the sun shines and cash in on war orders—but we cannot possibly do both."

"Living up to the arms embargo will be costly; it will make no mistake about that. It will prevent us from selling many a bill of goods. If the present war spreads and involves such nations as England and France, our loss will be even greater."

Nations still need to buy many things, and they are things which we are peculiarly well equipped to sell them.

But self-denial of that kind is the price of peace. If we are determined not to get drawn into another European War, our one hope is to forget about the profits.

The lesson of 1917 is unmistakable. When you set yourself up as warehouse and granary for a warring nation, you are simply leading with your chin; sooner or later you find your own fortunes intricately tied up with the fortunes of the army of your chief customer.

The anguish of these New York exporters is natural and understandable. Our embargo, even though it is incomplete, is costing them money. What we need to keep in mind is that any sound neutrality program is bound to be expensive.

But you might remember that the profits we would have lost if we had refused to sell goods to England and France during the World War would never amounted to a tenth of the money we actually did lose by going to war on their side.—Portsmouth Star.

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS

Perhaps no issue in Virginia strikes the heart and soul of more people today than the issue of text books for schools. Such books are now supplied by the state on contract, largely through a book publishing and jobbing house with which a brother-in-law of Governor George C. Peery is said to be a dominant figure.

We offer no criticism of this "all-in-the-family" policy, but we realize the tenderness with which assemblymen will be wont to approach the Virginian text book policy in January as a result.

School text-books cost too much. Too many states purchase and supply books to pupils free at a fraction of the cost Virginia parents must pay for books, not to feel that small economy is being exercised along this line. In Canada books are supplied at such a low cost that prices in the Old Dominion seem ridiculous in comparison.

Close investigation of the matter of free text books for pupils in the State system was launched at the session of the General Assembly two years ago by our own fellow townsmen, C. G. Queenberry. Mr. Queenberry made an exhaustive research and the findings he unearthed and laid before members of the Assembly instituted a mild revolution . . . but unfortunately too mild to bring about specific results at the time.

During the past two years Mr. Queenberry has continued his work. If returned to the House of Delegates in November, which seems altogether likely, he will undoubtedly make the welkin ring in Richmond so vociferously for free school books that something will result. He is to be commended for his courage and sincerity in carrying this fight forward.

Our system of free public schools cannot be regarded as truly "free" until the yoke of excessive text book costs is removed from the necks of parents, many of whom are barely able to clothe their children properly for school attendance, let alone buy text books that oftentimes require one and two week's wages to purchase.

Purchased at the proper price text books could be supplied each public school and issued to students for use. Such books, borrowed for a single term, could be returned and after thorough furnishing, be released to the same grade the following year. Such a policy would add only a slight tax burden, yet it would relieve the pressure on many an unfortunate father anxious to have his children grasp every educational advantage but handicapped economically in his efforts. The social advantages would far outweigh the proportionately small financial outlay on the part of the State.

Wall Paper "Streamlines" Interiors

Novel and particularly decorative effects may be achieved in any room in the house with a wide selection of "streamlined" wall papers now on the market. As illustrated above, horizontal lines in wall paper produce a modern effect and tend to lengthen the appearance of a room as well as to reduce the suggestion of extreme ceiling height.

Wall papers available in various colors and patterns are appropriate background to rooms furnished in the modern mode. Such papers are washable and materially add to the effectiveness of a home modernization project. Funds to purchase and place such wall papers may be obtained from private financial institutions holding Federal Housing Administration insurance contracts.

PIE SHOP STAFF VACATION OVER

Mrs. Warren, Miss Parks and Mr. Warren Report a Splendid Tour.

Home from a seventeen-day vacation which carried them to the Florida west coast and to Washington, D. C., the staff of Virginia Beach's distinctive Pie Shop has taken up again at the old stand, bubbling over with interesting tales of an unusually successful motor trip.

Mrs. Ruth W. Warren, Miss Edith Parks, Stephen Warren and Charles Lindbergh—their dog, not the famous aviator—left Virginia Beach on the morning of October 12 in the rejuvenated station wagon that had seen service during the summer for the Princess Anne Hotel. Stopping at tourist camps on the journey and cooking their own food in the out-of-doors, Route 17, the Coastal Highway, was followed through the Carolinas and Georgia into Florida, where St. Augustine was reached at the close of the third day of traveling.

Step in Passagille

Extensive sightseeing tours were enjoyed on the east coast, in central Florida and on the west coast, where Passagille was made their headquarters for two days and nights. Then, on the return tour, an interior route was followed, which brought its variety of scenery and interesting interior towns.

Returning to Virginia Beach last Friday night, that night was spent here and, on the morning, the tourists set out again, this time for Washington, where they visited with another son of Mrs. Warren, who is connected with the Capitol bureau of the Associated Press. On the trip to Florida, Mrs. Warren also visited with a brother in Fayetteville, N. C., and with a sister in Summerville, S. C.

NEW WPA GROUP ASSUMES DUTIES

(Continued from Page One) control and will be the bulk of Federal relief activity in this area, $50,000 recently was set aside by the WPA headquarters for mosquito eradication work here.

Under the new relief setup, men and women on the approved rolls will work a total of 140 hours per month, rather than the sporadic staggering system of labor effective under PERA. In exchange for this labor, a blanket wage of $18.90 will be paid in the county for unskilled labor, with graduated increases specified for higher types of work. This wage will apply to both men and women put to work on WPA projects. For the next two months, however, women's projects in the county will continue under PERA supervision, according to advices received this week.

Wage Set by Board

Determination of the security wage scale under which WPA operates is made by a county committee of representative employers. It represents, not the prevailing wage paid in the community for similar labor on private enterprises, but an amount sufficient to maintain a representative family without undue hardship. Thus, the $18.90 figure established in Princess Anne—incidentally, the lowest amount to be paid anywhere in the State—is not the work of a government bureau but that of citizens of the county.

A table showing contrasting monthly wages paid under the new WPA setup in Princess Anne county, Virginia Beach and Norfolk county follows. Norfolk City's scale is, of course, higher than any of the three quoted.

Type of Labor	P. A.	V. B.	N. C.
Unskilled	$18.90	$21.10	$31.50
Intermediate	30.00	33.00	52.00
Skilled	38.00	41.20	68.00
Professional
Technical	42.00	48.20	75.00

Discrepancies between city and county security wages are readily apparent, but the difference between Princess Anne and Norfolk counties, which adjoin one another and embrace a similar scale of living, is a puzzle no one has as yet been able to explain satisfactorily.

County's Load Lightened
With the discontinuance of PERA and the transference of the relief cases to WPA, a large part of the county's financial participation ceases, it was learned. Therefore, the county has been charged with the salary of foremen, the cost of transportation and some materials and supplies. These matters, are now under WPA control, with a consequent lightening of the relief load carried by the local communities.

It is the government's hope that this money will be utilized by the county for direct relief, whenever the need for such becomes apparent. WPA being a work agency only, there are no provisions made for further assistance to needy people who cannot supply an active member for work.

The contest was held at one of the state's finest orchards located in Gardiner.

BUILDING PLANS WILL BE DRAWN

and approved.

Col. Butler told the board that his office would be glad to handle the drawing of the plans in the event that the county decided not to initiate such action, but he added that the press of work would not permit such an undertaking for three or five months. He suggested that an architect be employed to do the work for the county and so hasten the beginning of the project.

New Manager to Cooperate

Mr. Dunn, who has been associated with the building trades for many years, agreed to cooperate with the supervisors in the drawing of the plans, and it is hoped that by the method agreed upon construction preliminaries can be speeded up materially. Both Mr. Payne and Mr. Odlin volunteered their services, the latter pointing out that a vital need exists for additional office space at the county centre.

Building contractors in the county have expressed the belief that the desired structure can be completed easily within the limits set by both Federal and county officials. Indeed, many are of the opinion that the second floor addition can be built with the funds subscribed by the WPA, although the contractual agreement calls for the payment of all skilled labor from county funds. The government money can be used for building materials and non-skilled labor, which will be furnished from the county relief rolls.

In all seven offices, a large work room for the county agent and storage space will be constructed. The plans tentatively agreed upon call for an addition in harmony with the structure to be enlarged, and the completed project is expected to add to the attractiveness as well as the efficiency of the county's physical equipment at Princess Anne.

Four Machines Donated

Four sewing machines were donated to the sewing rooms as a result of broadcasts made through the columns of the Virginia Beach NEWS, but eight additional machines must be had to accomplish the work program agreed upon. These will be rented from a commercial agency.

In response to Mrs. Haggard's plea, upon a motion by Payne and seconded by Dawley, the desired $75 was appropriated, in addition to the $10 for fuel set aside last month and the usual monthly appropriation of $10 for hauling of supplies. As a consequence, the New Light and Davis' Corners workrooms will be reopened immediately and made to function as that now operating at Seatack.

Surplus products, such as flour, meat, prunes, milk and butter will continue to be distributed to the county's needy, Mrs. Haggard stated, as in the past.

Kings Daughters Plea

Another plea for funds made to the county board came from the Kings Daughters organization of Norfolk. The work of this charitable group in Princess Anne county was explained in detail by the representative, who urged that last year's appropriation of $150 be increased materially in order to insure continuance of the various clinics and hospitalization services operated by the organization.

their annual contributions. Among the valuable features of the Kings Daughters organization are the maternity clinic, children's and babies' clinics and clinics for the control of social diseases, which are reported to be increasing in the county, both in white and colored ranks. 312 children from the county, including twenty operating cases, were cared for in the children's aid last year. Numerous mothers took advantage of the pre- and post-natal clinics. Action on the piles for funds deferred by the board of visitors.

Mileage Hints

MANY drivers, particularly during the touring season when they take long drives, have the very bad habit of "sliding the clutch," or driving with the feet looking lightly on the clutch pedal. This is one of various practices which cause the clutch to wear needlessly. As a matter of fact, if more persons knew how to use the clutch properly there would be much less clutch wear.

The clutch should be engaged slowly and properly, adjusted clutch takes hold gradually and does not slip or grab. It releases instantaneously when the pedal is depressed. A badly slipping clutch is usually so noticeable that the driver has little trouble in diagnosing it.

It is simple to test this, however.

With the car stopped, put on emergency brake on, put the gears in low, and then let in the clutch. The engine should stall immediately. However, if it continues to turn over in spite of the fact that the car is being held, the clutch is slipping.

Remember, a slipping clutch is a constant waste of power and fuel and a strain on the engine.

Be careful of this little detail, and if you are in any doubt make this simple test. If the clutch is slipping, it is adjusted at once.

MAST LEADS VPI LIVESTOCK TEAM

Group Places First at Baltimore Show; Ahead on Cat-tie, Hog Scoring.

Virginia Tech's livestock judging team recently returned from the Baltimore show with first honors in the Intercollegiate Judging contest safely tucked away. Teams from Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Maryland followed in the order named.

The Virginia team made the highest scores of all on cattle and hogs, judging so consistently well in other classes that the group placed first, even though the three highest individual scores were made by members of the Pennsylvania team.

Local Boy Scores

C. C. Mast, son of C. H. Mast, of Bayside, a senior at V. P. I., made the highest individual score among the members of his team and placed fourth in the contest. Young Mast is a graduate of the Kempville High School and well known throughout the county.

Other members of the Virginia team were W. A. Williams, Detroit; B. A. Rucker, Jr., Delaplane; W. C. Roberson, Galax; J. C. Conner, Staunton; J. H. Eller, Marion; J. R. Hyatt, Richlands, and W. C. Dudley, Cambria.

The work of the team reflects the training that Virginia Tech students receive in the animal husbandry department, which is headed by R. E. Hunt.

Virginia Beach Boy Scout Troop 60 defeated the Oceana Boy Scout football team last Thursday afternoon by the wide margin of 25 to 0. As the score indicates, the local boys had everything their own way from the beginning of the game to the final whistle.

This afternoon, at 4 o'clock, the local troop will sponsor a Haloween hike. All scouts are urged to meet at Seaside Park at the announced hour for the tramp to the Scout cabin on Linkhorn Bay.

Great preparations are being made by sportsmen throughout the County and by those who come here each year from the large cities to enjoy the hunting which will start next Monday. The bays and marshes seem to be alive with geese and ducks, and the woods and fields of Princess Anne County are full of rabbits, squirrels and quail. The law does not permit the killing of quail and rabbits until November 15th and hunters who do not observe the law will be dealt with harshly.

Jacob Elmer and Louis Laskin, all of Mount Vernon, N. Y., spent last Saturday, Sunday and Monday here going over plans for the development of the property that they purchased here during the summer. Elmer, spokesman for the group, said that their plans for the remodeling of the North End Casino, the building of an apartment house at 10th Street and the Plaza Hotel at 17th Street, and Atlantic Avenue, were progressing rapidly, but due to business keeping them in Mt. Vernon, where they are now erecting several large buildings, they had not been able to devote as much time here as they had hoped to.

Much interest is being manifested throughout the County in school activities as well as in other matters pertaining to the welfare of the homes. The County Demonstrator, Mrs. Taylor, whose salary for the last year was raised by popular subscription applied to the County Board of Supervisors again this week at the regular monthly meeting, for an appropriation to enable the work of Home Economics to continue, but owing to the financial condition the County declined to make an appropriation to enable the work to be continued. Shortly after the Board had declined to give the money necessary several gentlemen of the County immediately circulated a petition for voluntary subscriptions naming Mrs. A. E. Ewell as Treasurer for the purpose, and while the persons were present at the Courthouse the amount of four hundred dollars was quickly subscribed towards the necessary amount of seven hundred and fifty dollars to ensure the continuance of the work.

Introduction, by Mr. Oedin; good health report, by June Patterson, of Landale; report on county activities, by Raymond Eason, president of the county 4-H council; "4-H Trail Song" sung by a selected group of county boys and girls; a description of his prize poultry flock, by Richard Brown, of Kempsville; banjo selection, "Home on the Range," by Joseph Byrd, of Ocean City; poem, by Josephine Paul, Blackwater; song, "Mighty Like a Rose," sung by a group of girls from Creeds; initiation ceremony and pledge for new members, recited by boys of the Norfolk county club; song, "4-H Field Song," by the group; recital of State 4-H Club activities, by Mr. Oedin, and, in conclusion, the song, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," by the group.

Distinctive Honor'

The selection of the county organization to present the Virginia features of the Future Farmers' program by State and national agricultural leaders is a distinctive honor, which reflects unusual credit upon the interest shown in their club work by the boys and girls of the five county groups. It is anticipated that radio sets all over Princess Anne will be tuned in on this program because of its local interest.

The program will conclude with a final fifteen-minute review of national accomplishments from Washington.

NEW CHEVROLET'S NOW ON MARKET

Outstanding Improvements in Engineering Performance Seen in New Line.

New Master de luxe and Standard Chevrolets for 1936, embodying marked advance in styling, engineering, and performance, were introduced November 2 at the New York automobile show and simultaneously throughout the country at dealer salerooms, which have already been liberally stocked with new models for display and delivery.

Completeness in equipment, in appointments, and in convenience is stressed in the company's 1936 announcement.

The Master de luxe, offered with either knee action or conventional springing, has been restyled in its more important appearance elements, notably by the adoption of a higher and narrower grille of distinctively original design, in combination with a new treatment of the hood louvers, new style headlamps mounted on the sides of the radiator shell, and new interior trim.

The lower priced Standard models have been completely redesigned in chassis and bodies. Last year the Standards differed materially both in appearance and in construction from the Masters; this year, the two lines are identical in all major features of styling, engineering, and performance, the chief difference being only a matter of wheelbase.

Outstanding among the many new features of both Master and Standard models for 1936 are perfected hydraulic brakes; improved engines having higher compression ratio (6 to 1), balanced carburetor, full-length water jacketing, and other changes resulting in better cooling and improved gasoline and oil economy; and chrome rust-prevention of fenders and running boards.

Front doors of all models of both lines are now hinged at the front.

The solid steel turret top, exclusive last year with the Master models, has been adopted this year for the Standard line also. Spoke-type pressed steel wheels, instead of wire wheels, are used on all Standard models.

Body interiors of Master models show marked advance in comfort and style. An important innovation is found in the design of the front seating arrangement of the Master coach and town-sedan. Instead of the usual divided and hinged front seat of two-door models, a single seat cushion extends the full width of the car, permitting three passengers to ride comfortably. The seat-back is divided, the right side section being hinged to fold forward over the seat cushion to open a pass-way to the rear compartment. Chevrolet's Standard models for 1936, besides incorporating features that appear for the first time on the Masters, take their place in the line as entirely new models, with new box girder chassis frame, more powerful engine, longer wheel-base and larger bodies. The line of body types has been increased to seven by the addition of three models—the four-door sport sedan with built-in truck, the two-door town sedan with built-in truck, and the cabriolet.

DEMOCRATS WIN COUNTY EASILY; NO OPPOSITION IN LIGHT VOTE

Quiet Election Contest Sweeps Primary Winners Into Local Offices.

CANDIDATES UNOPPOSED HARRY DAVIS RETURNED

Woodhouse, After Sixteen Years in Clerk's Office, to Retire Soon.

In one of the quietest elections the county has seen in years, unopposed Democratic candidates were swept into office in Princess Anne county on Tuesday in the General election. Other sections of the state and nation may have had their upssets and their reverses in political control, but a dominant machine assured solid regularity.

Only in one local contest in the county was a change from the usual order noted, and that occurred in Kempsville District, where Nat Lascars, winner in the primary in the justice of the peace fight, was defeated by Arthur Sayers in a write-in movement. It has been rumored for some time that Lascars's friendliness for the defeated candidates would get him into trouble, and the trouble came in Tuesday's election.

No County Officers Opposed

This election marked the first time in many years that not a single candidate for county or state office was opposed and, although the voting was abnormally light in all precincts, there was no opportunity for an upset. The newly elected officials will take over their new posts on January 1.

Harry Davis was returned to his seat in the House of Delegates after facing no opposition in the Democratic primary in August and none last Tuesday.

Others elected were as follows:

Sidney S. Kellam, reelected county treasurer without opposition in the August primary.

Sheriff J. C. Litchfield, Jr., who defeated, in the primary, Roland Halstead, N. J. B. Etheridge, S. C. Rogers and V. A. Etheridge.

Commonwealth's Attorney Paul W. Ackins, Jr., reelected after defeating Joseph D. Deal in the primary.

Hughes Succeeds Woodhouse W. F. Hughes, elected to succeed E. F. Woodhouse as clerk of the Circuit Court of Princess Anne County. Mr. Hughes won the primary over Mr. Woodhouse, who is completing his sixteenth year in office.

John Sparrow, reelected commissioner of the revenue after defeating R. W. Bonney in the primary.

Old Donation's Annual Oyster Roast Planned For Tomorrow

Real Princess Anne Food Will Be Served at Outstanding County Function; Historic Church Opened For Public Inspection in Afternoon.

The Woman's Auxiliary of Old Donation P. E. Church, will have its annual fall oyster roast at the Parish House of the Church, Saturday November 9, from one to four in the afternoon.

There will be oysters—real old Lynnhavens, cooked as Princess Anne knows how to cook them—there will be Smithfield Ham sandwiches and all the other good things that go with an oyster roast. Delicious cakes, cookies and candies may be bought to eat on the premises or to take home for Sunday—and the famous Old Donation pickles and preserves will be on hand—made from receipts long famous in the county handed down from mother to daughter from time immemorial.

Church to Be Open

The old church will be open and visitors may see the famous and beautiful old silver—some of it used in the old church and also the old font used in the old church and dug up many years ago from the waters of the Lynnhaven.

LYNNHAVEN CLUB TO PLAY SUNDAY

Eleven Will Meet Blessingham Lumberjacks on Home Field at 3 O'clock.

Holding the strong Elizabeth City Cardinals to a 6-6 tie in their game last Sunday afternoon, the newly organized Lynnhaven eleven gave promise of a potential power which the supporters of the team are expecting to show to good advantage in next Sunday's game at Lynnhaven, where the local aggregation will meet the Blessingham Lumberjacks at 3 o'clock.

Outplayed in the first half by the ex-college stars of Carolina, Lynnhaven settled down to the serious business of playing heady football in the third and fourth quarters, pushing across the tying score in the final frame when Charlie Caton tossed a running pass to Henley, who spurned down the field for fifty yards and a touchdown. A bad pass from center spoiled the try for the extra and winning point.

Sawyer Scores For Cardinals

It was in the second quarter that the Elizabeth City team crossed the Lynnhaven goal. Shirt Sawyer, after a succession of first downs by his teammates that carried the ball to within scoring distance, hit the line for the necessary yardage. The try for the extra point went wild, and that was the last opportunity the Cardinals had to score, although several times they did cross the thirty-yard line and land within scoring distance.

The second play of the game, specializing in the teaching of all types of ballroom, health and stage work, will begin its 1935-36 session in the Cavalier Hotel ballroom tomorrow. Registrations will begin at nine o'clock and will continue throughout the day, for men and women in the health and dancing classes and for children of all ages in the other types of instruction.

According to Mrs. Mitchell, wife of the assistant manager of the Cavalier Hotel, the buck made two leaps from the opposite side of the road, bounded over a truck moving in a westward direction and ran squarely into their car. The action was so fast and unexpected that nothing could be done to avoid the inevitable collision.

The occupants of the car fared much better than the deer, reporting nothing more than a few bruises and a touch of nerves.

Mr. Deer was brought to Virginian Beach, where he was turned over to the local game warden, receiving, going out of bounds on the 3-yard stripe. Once over that hurdle, the Carolinians were safe from scoring threats during the first half.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, created by Congress in June, 1934, affords protection for investors in thrift and home-financing institutions, similar to that given depositors in commercial banks by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with one material distinction. The FDIC, organized in 1933, insures bank deposits, subject to demand withdrawal, whereas the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation operates in the long-term savings and home-financing field, insuring the safety of investors' funds. The compelling appeal of the most famous of Red Cross world war posters has been adapted by the distinguished artist Lawrence Wilbur in the 1935 Red Cross roll call poster.

In submitting a design for the 1935 poster, Wilbur, who has painted a number of posters for the Red Cross, placed the shadowy figure of mercy in the background, with the practical Red Cross nurse succoring a sick and wounded child in the foreground. "Still the Greatest Mother" is his title.

THE RED CROSS NEEDS YOUR SUPPORT

JOIN

The campaign to secure the funds needed to carry on its life and soul-saving work during the coming year. Solicitation groups are now canvassing Princess Anne county and Virginia Beach, anxious to establish a better record than that of the last campaign.

To visualize the work now being done by the American Red Cross is to scan the troubled international horizon from the disease-ridden swamps of Ethiopia, across a hurricane-swept Florida to our own little county, where funds are being expended daily for the purchase of milk for children and medicine for the ailing. Wherever physical suffering is to be found, particularly among those unable to pay for needed medical attention, there is the Red Cross, the greatest agency ever operating in the world for the relief of distress.

Disaster strikes suddenly and without warning, leaving in its wake a toll of suffering and ruin that demands immediate attention. With local facilities unable to function, it is the Red Cross which comes to the aid of the community, of the state, of the nation, and the efficiency with which it does its work needs no comment in these columns. It is unique and it is effective, an agency with which we cannot afford to part or to hamper in its activity.

And, as it carries on in the more spectacular fields of disaster, so does it serve daily the demands of each community in the United States. The highway first-aid program which is now being put into operation, the spirited campaign for safety in the home which is being conducted through the schools and the work of the county nurse among the mothers and children of the county are but a few of the many details which embrace the wide program of the local Red Cross.

The dollar or two which is sought as your contribution to the continuance of this work will matter little to you, but it will make a considerable difference to the Red Cross and to the unfortunate it will be called upon to serve during the coming year. The movement is worthy of wholehearted endorsement and support, and we may consider it a privilege to share in its operation through our individual contributions.

Remember, when you are approached for a contribution, that you too may need the services of the Red Cross before the next year has been brought to a close.

KNOW YOUR SCHOOLS

Next week has been set aside as National Education Week, a period for acquainting the general public with the progress being made under modern curricula and to bring to popular attention future needs of the State's educational system. Open house will be observed in all county schools from Monday through Friday, with a county-wide educational rally set for next Friday night in the Ocean High School. Parents and taxpayers are urged to inspect the schools during this week and to attend the planned meeting, the better to understand the aims and achievements of modern education.

Much criticism is voiced today by men and women unsympathetic to the modern school program, and much of that criticism, we believe, springs from a lack of knowledge and understanding on the part of the complainers. These people owe it to themselves and to their children to learn at first hand just what is going on and the reason for it.

No better time for such inspection and study will present itself than during the coming week.

REFORM OF THE ALIENIST

Now that a State commission has been appointed by Governor Fearey to suggest needed reforms in the criminal code of the Old Dominion, it is time to give some thought to that modern manufacturer of expert testimony, the alienist. Obviously the degree of mental incapacity of the defendant at the time of his crime is a matter for the serious consideration of the court, for guilty or otherwise, to punish him for an act over which he had no control is as manifestly unfair as to turn his loose upon a community in which he might repeat his crime.

However, consideration of the cases in which psychiatrists have given their seemingly expert testimony in past years in criminal actions produces a whole mass of conflicting evidence. In many instances, what has been said for the defense has been denied by the prosecution, on equally tenuous grounds, and the general public has come to the conclusion—a just one in many cases, we suspect—that the size of the fee and the position of the client has had more to do with those decisions and bits of testimony than the actual facts as they were or were not uncovered.

This is not a blasting indictment of psychiatry as an exact science of medicine or of psychiatrists as irresponsible complices with the criminals they try to protect. Many years of study of this new to thinking men have uncovered a mass of valuable data, though it does well in a sea of gush-and-theory that often brings the conclusion that he who observes is little more than the actual patient. Yet, its sound findings can be of material assistance to the court in determining the exact degree of guilt of the defendant, but we do not believe it can be held a valuable asset so long as the present buying and selling of its practitioners is continued. The observations of reputable doctors all too often are denied consideration because of the claptrap presented by less scrupulous men appearing on the other side of the case.

Those who plead for peace, who would impress upon all men the true meaning of the Armistice, will find themselves branded as pacifists and cowards of the worst order in the speeches of Monday. Men will be moved to the heights of oratorical splendor by the contemplation of the dead and the maimed, of the shattered homes and the brutal waste of resources of the past war; yet these same men would drive us on along a similar trail, masking their true thoughts behind a cloak of preparedness. To them, there is nothing paradoxical in their argument, no incongruity in their reasoning, for war is as natural and as certain as the coming of the seasons.

But, for all of our despairings, the message of the Armistice is yet a very real one, never to be forgotten. Kings and dictators, grasping financiers and callous munitions interests may continue to preach their doctrines of blood and terror, but the common man, who first gave to modern warfare its possibility of mass destruction at the battle of Hastings, is slowly coming to the simple truth that, as no important conflict in the world's history has been settled solely by the force of arms and the wanton wasting of human life, so will it never be. This determination to end forever our greatest destructive inheritance from savage man and to replace the rule of brute force by the law of reason—is this the message which the Armistice slowly is inculcating in the minds of countless men and women the world over.

Its voice is much too small to be of great force today, but the greatest lesson of Democracy, that all men can live at peace with one another in an atmosphere of cooperation and that they are the serfs of no grasping masters, will yet bear fruit. The mesh shall yet inherit the earth and blessed shall be the peacemakers.

The commission on the reform of the Virginia criminal code will do well to consider such a procedure. The alienist undoubtedly needs reforming, and the proper way to attack such a problem is through the hearty cooperation of the medical society and those who will recommend changes in procedure to the governor.

THE MESSAGE OF THE ARMISTICE

Next Monday morning, when bell and siren announce the coming of the seventeenth anniversary of the Armistice that brought the bloody years of the World War to conclusion and thoughts turn back to those fatal days of 1918, we may well stop and ponder on the fruits of our supposed victory. Those fruits have become rather bitter in the intervening years, their one-time glossy surface has become gnarled and shrunk, and a disillusioned world looks with a feeling akin to horror upon their wormy interiors.

No better time for such inspection and study will present itself than during the coming week.

As Others See It

TIMES ARE OUT OF JOINT

The times are out of joint largely because we demand a maximum of return on a minimum of investment. We want to reap where we have not sown, says the Penobscot (W-Va.) News. The worker who loans on the job; the employer who will not pay a fair wage; the farmer who puts the big berries at the top of the box; the merchant who gouges the customer; the customer who "beats" the merchant; the business, big or little, that exploits the public; the skin game operator whether he do business in a luxuriously equipped office or with a pea and three shells in a cheap show, even one who thinks that the world not only owes him a living but will beat a path to his door and then break the door in to tender payment without effort on his part—all these and others are trying to get something for nothing; insisting that they eat bread and cake as well in the sweat of other people's faces.

The world owes us but one thing—a chance to earn our own living—to "stut out stuff." To collect that requires strenuous effort. If one finds himself earning an income that assures him three square meals—not Lucullan feasts—a day, that will prevent him and his from becoming invincible nudists and will keep a non-leaking roof over their heads, it is better off than is the average world citizen. We Americans want everything plus that any of our neighbors simply because they are Italians, French, German or English. When we can reach that divine state where we can approach whole nations with the same spirit of goodwill and cooperation as we greet the man who lives next door, tending strictly to his own business, we will have accepted in all its hope and its promise for the future the message given to us seventeen years ago on the war-torn fields of France.

SONNET

In truth soft trees are whispering a song

To one who waits in solitude alone Listening to the small brook's soothng tone
Forever saying, "Living lasts too long!"

When one holds fast to faith there is no wrong,

No bitterness, no pain where love is sown;

And to all spirits—when desire has flown—

Songs of the soul through life to death sing strong.

Some happiness there is with each new dawn

To comfort as we weary of life's path.

So unto us comes peacefulness—not wrath;

And compensation for lost years is born.

Lovely outlives time e'en to the aftermath

When death shall claim the soul some early morn.

Now the sudden shower's done, A new world and a deeper one

Is lying under every tree,

Small blue cousin of the sea.

Made of water from on high,

These pools of unearthly dye

Show the elm tree's arching crown

And the white clouds upside down.

Such pools are not pools to wade,

It would make the feet afraid

To walk through such a lovely wonder

Fouled from the hogheads of the thunder.

Deft and serene the formal sun
Enormously proceeds through space,

And through infinity is spun

A pattern of concentric grace

Planet and star devise for us

Angle, curve, and parallel line.

We find all things prodigious

Adhere precisely to design.

A narrow object is the heart,

Inconsequential and absurd:

The product of a dubious art.

Of pattern ineffect and blurred.

Wherefore the heart may boldly dare

A route no compass has extended,

Abstractly carve an arc in air

Uncharted and uncomprehended.

Today we are tired if a trip from Elizabeth City to Norfolk consumes little more than an hour, and folly in his old home town of Bertford think nothing of leaving home after breakfast spending the day in Norfolk and getting back home in ample time for supper. And still we cry for speed and more speed. Are we any happier for all of our modern time-saving transportation? I doubt it. We are a little wiser of course; but a little wisdom brings us only discontent and sorrow.—Elizabeth City (N.C.) Independent

THE IRISH-AMERICAN SWEEPSTAKES

The drawing of tickets in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes on the Cambridgeshire race at Newmarket (the last of the three annual races on which prime tickets are sold), and the actual results of the race itself, indicate that Americans will get about 43.5 per cent of the pot that is set aside for lucky ticket-holders. How much Americans invested is more difficult to ascertain, but probably, and in the long run certainly, the ratio of their investment to the total investment would be about the same as the ratio of their winnings to the total winnings. It seems probable, therefore, that the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes is more than 40 per cent an American enterprise.

Of the grand pool, about one-quarter goes to Irish hospitals. If our calculations are correct, therefore, out of every $1,000,000 received by the hospitals, something like $400,000 comes from American pockets. That, of course, is entirely satisfactory to the hospitals and to the Irish government under whose auspices the world's greatest gamble is conducted. They do not care where the money comes from. They have simply taken advantage of what everyone knew: that the volume of sucker money in this world is enormous, and that a well-organized scheme for getting hold of it will always succeed.

A grateful republic, however, should in common courtesy go one step further. Since the care of the sick in the Irish hospitals is paid for, to the extent of more than 40 per cent, by American gamblers, and since Americans are so enthusiastic about having the opportunity of supporting these worthy charities that they frequently disregard law to do it, and since they do so in greater degree than the people of any other country, the least that the lords of the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes could do, in common courtesy to the suckers on this side of the Atlantic, would be to amend the name of this enterprise so that hereafter it will be known as the Irish-American Sweepstakes. We suggest that the board of directors will consider this proposal at their next meeting.—Clifton Forge Review.

THE LEES OF VIRGINIA
Biography of a Family.
By Burton J. Hendrick
Little, Brown, 455 pp. $3.75

A Review by Paul Murray Kendall, Fellow in English, University of Virginia.

The Lee family is best known to us through the famous son of its later days, General Robert E. Lee. The winning charm of his personality, the heroic role he played in the struggle of the Confederacy, as well as his proximity to our own day, have served to concentrate almost undivided attention upon him at the expense of his forebears. Yet this family from which he sprung boasted great men long before the Confederate leader's generation. The Lee of Lee has more merit in it than any other family," wrote John Adams in 1779. In "The Lee of Virginia" Burton J. Hendrick has set about the task of recording the achievements of this powerful Virginia clan, particularly the distinguished role it played in the formation of the American State.

In accomplishing this work, Mr. Hendrick, who has three times received awards for his biographical and historical writings, has created a new and significant form of life-writing, the family biography. Here is revealed the impact and effect of a great Virginia house upon American events and ideas. Richard Lee, founder of the family in this country, came to Virginia in the middle of the seventeenth century and quickly became a man of substance and importance in the colony. His son, Richard, likewise held high place in the management of colonial affairs and consolidated and enlarged the already extensive patrimony left him by his father. It was this Richard's fifth son, Thomas, who founded the famous line of Stratford Lees. Thomas

Lee became President of Virginia, and it was he who first set the family to thinking in terms of a nation by his dreams of westward expansion, but his fame is overshadowed by that of his great sons who, in their diverse ways, played so important a part in the American Revolution and the subsequent weighty business of founding a state.

Richard Henry Lee, the friend of Washington, led the radicals in the Continental Congress who cried out for independence, and sponsored the motion on the floor of that Congress which cast off the rule of England and declared the colonies a free and sovereign nation. Afterwards he became President of Congress and still later, though he had opposed the adoption of the Constitution as a servile loyalty to States Rights, he served loyally as United States Senator. Richard Henry Lee's younger brother, Arthur, rendered almost as distinguished services in the field of diplomacy. Through his skillful intrigues, secret treaties guaranteeing money and supplies were signed with France and Spain. Though Cassandra-like he prophesied to deaf ears the treachery and treason of several American agents, and though his later efforts were obscured by the work of Franklin at the court of France, it was largely through his efforts that successful and fruitful relations of the rebellious colonies were established with European governments. In this work he had frequently as his able assistant his brother, William, who likewise negotiated with Prussia and Austria.

Another branch of the family, the Lelys or Lees, produced also an outstanding figure in the American Revolution, the dashing and debonair "Light Horse Harry" Lee, who inspired military strategy and daring cavalry raids did much to bring victory to colonial arms. After the war he became an ardent advocate of the Federal Constitution and later Governor of Virginia and member of Congress. He was not a man of practical affairs and, after dissipating his own and his wife's fortune, he died in misery and oblivion. But he bequeathed to his state a son who was destined to become the most famous member of a famous family, Robert Edward Lee. And with the great general ends, except for the noteworthy performance of Fitzhugh Lee in the Spanish-American war, the greatness and significance of the Lee family.

In "The Lees of Virginia" Mr. Hendrick has set himself a great task and done it well. He has adroitly disentangled the complicated skeins of intricate genealogies and reveals each of his characters as a significant individual, not only in himself, but also in relation to the clan of which he was a member and the state which he served. So intertwined are the affairs of the Stratford Lees with the fate of the American Revolution that in dealing with the one Mr. Hendrick likewise presents a detailed and colorful picture of the other. "The Lees of Virginia," then, is at once history and biography and as both is an important and admirable volume.

"This Body the Earth" by Paul Green is a book of great social significance, yet we doubt that anyone reading it will think of anything but the story, so great is the story's pull. The theme is that of a Southern sharecropper's thirst for love and power. The only member of his family with ambition, Alvin Barnes, poor white, had all the qualities that takes to win—ability to work, doggedness in the face of defeat, knowledge of the land. But he had a wife, married for her prettiness, who did not love him. Barnes could not win. His wife did for Barnes what the powers of the community could not do—break him. So vividly real is this work that on finishing it we are constrained to admit that we have known a man and felt kinship with him.

In "The Longest Years" Sigrid Undset does what another great lady of letters, Selma Lagerlöf, did not do so well in her tale of life at Markacka. To be brief, this is the story of a childhood, but through the little girl in it is called Ingvid Seming, she is really the author, or what the author remembers of her past. There is little action in this world of childhood, for childhood is the place of imagination. So what little adventure there is made up of such things as moving from one house to another, falling downstairs, being bitten by a dog, the discovery of sex. "The Longest Years" will have a limited number of readers because of its narrow scope, but they will be enthusiastic. The work in its own way is great.

Proud of the antiquity of their Corps, the U. S. Marines will reach their 160th anniversary on November 10.

Before the Declaration of Independence was signed, and long before Old Ironsides sailed the seas, the corps was created in 1775 to aid the colonies in their first fight for freedom. Drum beats of the Revolution found an answering echo in the establishment of a corps of Marines.

Carried Rattlesnake Insignia

The urgent necessity of placing armed men aboard our war vessels led the Continental Congress, then convened at Philadelphia, to authorize the formation of two battalions on the date observed by the sea soldiers as their birthday.

Shortly afterward Benjamin Franklin saw a life and drum corps parading through the streets of the Quaker City. Their swallow-tail coats were green, faced with red, and they wore green shirts, white woolen jackets, light colored cloth breeches, woolen stockings, and a round hat with white binding.

But Franklin was mostly impressed by the device borne on their drums, which he described in a letter to a friend as a rattle-snake with this motto underneath it. "Don't tread on me!"

An old hostelry on the Delaware waterfront, called Tun Tavern, was the rendezvous of these marines. From there they left to board frigates of our new Navy for their first expedition to the West Indies. In March, 1776, they landed at New Providence in the Bahamas, and without much opposition captured two forts from the British and secured a large supply of necessary war materials for sailing home.

Early Virginia Marines

Thirty-five years before the birthday of the Marine Corps a pioneer force of sea soldiers was organized. It was made under his banner under the British flag in campaigns in the West Indies. A large number of Virginians were enrolled in its ranks.

It was first named after the former Governor of Virginia, Colonel Alexander Spotswood, and the preliminary plans for its organization were made under his direction. Colonel Spotswood died in 1740, and the command of the seafarers fell to William Gooch, who later became Governor of Virginia.

Most of the colonies along the Atlantic seaboard furnished men for the new marine regiment, which was known as Gooch's Marines and was organized for service in the Caribbean under Admiral Vernon.

England was at war with Spain and the mother country turned to the colonies for troops to aid in the expulsion of the Spanish from the West Indies. Virginia's contribution to Gooch's Marines was 400 men, together with a sum approximating $25,000. The captain of one of her companies was George Washington, half brother of George Washington.

Second and fourth Sundays—

onials, numbering several hundred had arrived at Jamaica by November, 1740, and the full force of three or four thousand men was ready for service under Admiral Vernon a few weeks later.

Lack of cooperation between the land and sea forces resulted in their failure to drive the Spanish out of their strongholds in the West Indies. Diseases of the tropics took a heavy toll, and only about one-tenth of these marines ever returned to their native land.

Action at sea, however, were more successful, and many valuable vessels together with their cargoes were captured. Henry Cabot Lodge wrote: "The cooperation of Virginia and her sister colonies with the mother country in the fruitless expedition against Cartagena served merely as one more step in the development of the union."

There's a long, long trail winding back to 1775, and the date which the U. S. Marines observe as their birthday. In subsequent years they have taken part in all the big and little wars of our country and have embarked on scores of successful expeditions. The saga of the sea soldiers parallels that of the Navy. It is interwoven in the intricate patchwork of events that comprise the story of our nation.

Time moves rapidly. The Tun Tavern disappeared, along with its colonial surroundings. In the march of progress it was swept away to make room for a modern warehouse, which now stands on the spot where a little band of seagoing patriots gathered some 160 years ago.

They were the first U. S. Marines authorized by the resolution of November 10, a group of rough and ready men, equipped with musket and cutlass, who were prepared to give their first service to their country—a service that has been faithfully rendered for eight score years.

This uncanny action, created by the patented Conoco Germ Process, automatically wipes out the costliest winter wear...

"Dry," unlubricated, wracking starts? ... Not with the oil that's Germ Processed to stay up on the job every minute, every hour, every day that you park—whatever the weather! ... Not when Germ Processed Oil has become a part of all metal surfaces... Not with the Hidden Quart, which has enabled many an engine to run with the crankcase absolutely empty—in verified show-down tests.

And this same patented Germ Process means extra protection not only for the conventional babbitt bearings, but for the newest bearings—whether copper-lead, high-lead or cadmium-alloy. Germ Processing also creates the high-durability oil film... hence a light, free-flowing winter oil that's tougher too, for the toughest going of all the year. PAstry AND PIES

"Home-made pie" is a phrase which causes our mouths to water in anticipation of future joys or in reminiscence of the pie "Mother used to make." Pie is accused of being indigestible. Still people go on eating it, especially men who eat from home. Pie or pastry made according to rules is not indigestible at all.

The secret of making good pastry appears to be a matter of not over mixing the ingredients. If the fat, flour and liquid are mixed together in tiny particles to resemble a solid mass, they tend to stay that way and give a smooth, solid tough crust which is impervious to heat and browns unevenly. Care in mixing the ingredients should begin with adding the fat and flour. With the large proportion of fat used, it is easy for the inexperienced person especially, one who uses her fingers, to keep on working the ever-warming fat into the flour, until the grains of the latter become so coated with grease that they will not take up enough water to make the pastry flaky. What we really want are particles of fat coated with flour. There is little danger of over-doing the process if one starts with chilled fat, works quickly, and uses knives rather than the fingers in mixing the fat and flour. The fat particles should be about the size of a very large pea, or even larger. The most important point is to add the water in such a way as to distribute it evenly among all the fat-flour particles. Give each fat-flour particle just enough water to dampen it to the point where it will stick together. Do this by sprinkling a small portion of water over the surface of the fat-flour mixture, then stirring the two together with a fork, using a tossing motion made by running the fork along the bowl and bringing it up gently through the mixture. To determine when you have added enough water, press the dampened particles gently to see if they tend to stick together; when they do, divide them in the required number of portions, forming each in a dish by pressing together without mixing or kneading.

The ticklish business of adding water would be somewhat simpler if we could give an exact measure of water which could be counted on to give the exact degree of dampness for a given amount of fat and flour. This, however, we cannot do, for the amount varies with the temperature and fineness of the ingredients. It is best for warm, than cold ingredients, less for finely divided particles than for coarse ones, and more when water is added slowly rather than quickly.

If the room is cool and we work quickly, we take no special precaution regarding the temperature of the ingredients other than to keep the fat in the refrigerator.

How to roll top crust under bottom crust to eliminate crusts breaking apart around the edges and allowing the juice to run out into the oven.

Roll out bottom crust and fit into pie. Trim off the edge of crust even with pan. Add the pie filling and roll out top crust. Cut vents in top crust to allow steam that is formed during the baking period to escape. Moisten edges of bottom crust with cold water and place on top crust. Press edges together and with scissors cut off top crust leaving $\frac{1}{2}$ inch of pastry hanging over edge of pie tin. Roll this top crust so that the edge laps over the edge of bottom crust and using a table fork press the two edges together. This locks the top and bottom crusts together and eliminates the crusts breaking apart causing juice to run out into the oven.

Apple Pie
3 $\frac{1}{2}$ cups fresh apples
4 tablespoons flour
1 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar
1 tablespoon butter

Peel apples, core and cut in eights. The pieces of apple should be at least $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick, if they are cut thinner the pie will be very juicy. Combine $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of the sugar with the flour and spread evenly over the bottom of a pastry pie tin. Add apples and pour remaining sugar over apples. Add butter and cinnamon or nutmeg.

German plays are being presented at a hotel in Dairen, Manchuria.

Place top crust as instructions given above and place pie in an oven preheated to 450° for 15 minutes, reduce temperature to 375° for 30 minutes.

Lemon Meringue Pie

5 tbsp. flour
6 tbsp. cornstarch
1 tsp. salt
1 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. sugar
2 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. boiling water
9 egg yolks
1/2 c. lemon juice
Grated rind one lemon
1 tsp. butter

Mix dry ingredients—add boiling water—Cook 15 minutes in double boiler. Remove from heat. Add to beaten egg yolks—Stir in lemon juice, rind, and butter. Cook 2 minutes longer. Cool and pour into baked crust, top with meringue, and bake 15-20 minutes at 325°.

Chocolate Pie

3 sqs. chocolate (each sq. 1 oz.)
3 c. warm milk
1 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
3 egg yolks
1 c. vanilla (optional)
1 tsp. butter

Mix chocolate—add milk—Cook until thickened. Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt together. Stir in first mixture—Cook 15 minutes in double boiler—remove from heat and stir in beaten egg yolks—Cook 3 minutes longer—Add butter—cool. Pour into baked crust. Top with meringue and bake 15-20 minutes at 325°.

Polls Held Accurate

Seven of the eleven polls were held in advance of elections and each of the seven forecast the official outcome with a small margin of error, the magazine reports.

The Literary Digest states that just prior to the 1932 election it predicted Roosevelt would get 59.86 per cent of the popular vote in his campaign against Hoover. The official returns showed that the President received 59.14 per cent of the Roosevelt-Hoover vote revealing an error of 0.72 per cent in the magazine's forecast.

In the spring of 1932 a poll of the national sentiment on Prohibition forecast a popular vote of 75.05 per cent for repeal. Returns from the States' elections which brought about the demise of the Eighteenth Amendment in 1933 showed a combined percentage of 73.41 for repeal, evidencing a deviation of 1.64 per cent, error in the magazine's balloting on the Prohibition question.

A staff of more than 3,000 additional employees is reported to have been engaged by The Literary Digest for the mailing of the ballots and the tallying of the returns in the forthcoming New Deal poll.

4-H Members Tell Of Achievements

Reciting the accomplishments of the county 4-H club during the past year, outstanding members of the five local units last Saturday noon told a listening radio audience of what the youth of Princess Anne is doing to make farm life a healthier and happier one than has existed in the past. The half-hour program, under the direction of H. W. Ozlin, county agent, and broadcast over the facilities of Station WTAR, was produced in connection with national 4-H Club Achievement Day, and was part of the full hour's ceremonies dedicated to the future farmers movement.

Norfolk county club members assisted in the program, which included a health report by June Patterson, of Lansale; report on county 4-H Club activities, by Raymond Eaton, president of the county council; a description of his prize poultry flock, by Richard Brown, of Kempsville; banjo selection by Joseph Byrd, of Ocean; poem, by Josephine Paul, of Blackwater, and songs by a quartette of girls from Creeds and by the group assembled in the studio. Mr. Ozlin spoke of the origins of the movement and of the national accomplishments.

STREET, SEWAGE PROBLEMS HEARD

Routine Matters Occupy Attention of Council: Bridge Repairs Asked.

Routine matters of street and sewage repairs occupied the attention of the town council at the November meeting, last Monday night. Russell Land, mayor pro tem, presided in the absence of Roy Smith, who was absent from the town on a trip to New York. All other members of the council were in attendance.

Appealing for the repair of the Sixth Street bridge on behalf of the citizens residing in Shore Acres and Shadow Lawn Heights, a Mr. Dawson pointed out that the bridge, now in an unusable condition, is their only means of egress and exit to their homes, unless a circuitous route—"almost as long as going to Portsmouth"—is taken. The bridge, it developed, is not owned by the town but by the defunct Shore Acres Corporation and should the town determine upon repairs, such an action will make it liable for any damage suits occasioned by accidents happening at the bridge.

Without Town Services

Mr. Dawson stated that although this section of the incorporated town was without water, light, sewage or police facilities, it was the hope of his fellow residents that the town would see fit to repair the bridge, since failure to do so might make necessary a wholesale desertion of the section. Although main roads have been kept up by the town force, he told the council that all avenues of travel branching off the main streets were built and maintained by the residents themselves.

Don Calcott, town engineer, told the council that both Fourth and Fifth streets will be opened to travel into that section within thirty days, and it was suggested that in the event nothing is done regarding the bridge a connecting road might be developed from Sixth to Fifth street for the residents of the southern section of the town. It also was proposed that iron strips might be purchased for repairing the top structure of the bridge or that the whole affair might be torn down and a fill and culvert placed there instead.

Action Up to Committee

Further action on the proposal was referred to the streets committee.

R. Lee Page and Major Paul W. Kear told council that they would pay for the construction of a twenty-four inch pipe from their property to the main at Holly Road if the town would undertake the expense of covering the existing ditch. The necessary action was approved.

In recognition of his long service to the town, upon the motion of R. B. Taylor, L. B. Gray was given the title of superintendent of water and sewers. There was some discussion as to the propriety of such a move, but the motion was approved unanimously upon its conclusion.

Pete Poteat Guesses He's Guess Champion

Pete Poteat, local manager of the Virginia Electric and Power Company, is boasting of his ability as a guesser. Last week, while attending the Hallowe'en dance at Marr's Dairy Barn, Pete took a look at a quart jar filled with candy corn, paid his nickel fee and guessed as to how many were 665 pieces in it. It so happened that 668 pieces was the correct number, and for his brilliant figuring Pete came home with the prize cake, all set up about his accomplishment.

Several weeks ago, when Pete McLaren, the champion woodcutter, was demonstrating axes here, Pete Poteat also guessed most closely to the number of minutes he needed to get through the mammoth log. He allows now as how he's a pretty good guesser.

Eagle Eats Cat, Trays Dog

After eating various stray cats it became the ambition of a huge eagle at Gainsborough, South Africa, to devour bigger game. A fullgrown fox terrier was fast asleep in the sun when the bird swooped down and struck its talons into the dog's haunches. Before the dog realized what had happened it was dangling 10 feet in the air. For about 20 yards the bird held its prey tenaciously, but it could not rise higher and had to let go. The dog fell in soft earth and was rescued by natives before the eagle could attack again.

Carelessness Is Costly

Careless handling and disease can cause losses to distributors and consumers of fresh fruits and vegetables which may run as high as 45 percent. Peppers, tomatoes, strawberries, onions, raspberries and lettuce, among others, are easily damaged, but careful handling and refrigeration can greatly reduce the losses, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has determined.

The greatest losses probably are to the consumer, who also has some losses after purchase. When these are great, he ceases to buy and the producer also loses.

PROGRAM DRAWN FOR SPUD CROP

Plans For Diversion for Industrial Uses Proposed by Administrators.

The outlines of a proposed program designed to increase the income to potato growers from their 1935 crop has been announced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The proposed program includes (1) a plan for the diversion, for industrial uses, of potatoes of the 1935 crop, because of low prices and glutted markets, and (2) provides for the use of marketing agreements for potatoes of the 1935 crop now being harvested.

Details Discussed

The details of the program are being discussed in a series of regional meetings which began on October 21.

The diversion plan would be operative in surplus regions when the market was so glutted and the price in those areas was so low that conversion would be to the financial advantage of growers. An increase in the price of high grade potatoes to between one-half and three-fourths of parity would automatically, under ordinary circumstances, result in the cessation of diversion and cause the potatoes to be sent to their customary market instead.

Thus, the elimination of a part of the surpluses which have contributed to low prices would eliminate the need for diversion and insure the conservation of all potatoes that are needed for food. On the other hand, a subsequent decline in the price of potatoes would make the diversion operation again and would tend to prevent declines beyond certain levels.

Seeking to Raise Value

Neither the surplus diversion plan nor the marketing agreement proposal are in any sense a substitute for the Potato Act of 1935, which becomes effective on potatoes harvested after December 1, 1935. The measures under immediate contemplation were designed specifically to assist in remedying the distress to growers resulting from the current low price of potatoes.

"For most of the current marketing season potatoes have been selling at half, or less than half, their fair exchange value," said J. B. Hutson, director of the division which formulated the program. "It is doubtful whether any action we can take would raise the price of the 1935 crop of potatoes to parity. We would feel, however, that our efforts had been worth while if the price were maintained at three-fourths of parity, or around that level."

The parity price for potatoes at present is 89.6 cents per bushel. The average price received by growers last season was 51.7 cents per bushel, and the price received by growers this season, prior to October 1, averaged about 15 cents below the price for the corresponding period for last season.

FANCIERS MAKE LOCAL SHOW BID

Plans Discussed For Formation of Norfolk-Virginia Beach Association.

Plans for a Virginia Beach-Norfolk Horse Show Association, to hold one or more shows a year, were made at a dinner meeting at the Cavalier Hotel last Saturday in honor of the judges for the show at the Norfolk Saddle Club, held last Sunday. Approximately fifty horse fanciers were present.

At the business part of the meeting, presided over by Judge R. B. Spindler, Jr., a committee of five was named to work out plans for the association. The committee consists of Oscar F. Paul, chairman; Mrs. Fontaine Maura Thraves, Samuel G. Jones, W. Taylor Johnson and Major Paul W. Kean.

According to tentative plans, the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Association would sponsor shows at the beach and in Norfolk under the supervision of the American Horse Show Association. A minimum of $1,500 in cash prizes would be awarded during each of the shows, while the committee hopes to be able to offer $2,500 in prizes, so assuring Tidewater horsemen that their mounts will compete against the leading horses of several states.

If the plan is approved, the Virginia horse show circuit, which now starts at Hampton, will probably start in Norfolk a week earlier, swinging to Hampton at the usual time.

State Grange Seeks to Increase Progress of Rural Lighting Plans.

Creation by the State of Virginia of a Rural Electric Authority, similar to the State Port Authority, is necessary to inaugurate and adequately conduct a program of rural electrification, the Virginia State Grange believes, Dr. Meade Ferguson, State Master, announced in Richmond yesterday.

Such a proposal is one of five main objectives recommended in a report of the taxation and legislation committee adopted at the State Convention recently held in Harrisonburg.

Other objectives include: recommendation that the General Assembly submit an amendment to the State Constitution which would make possible the election of a combined school board and board of supervisors in order to give the people a greater voice in school management; that the State Planning Board should formulate a comprehensive long-time plan for dealing with the problem of marginal people; that additional state revenue be obtained through a system of steeply graded income taxes and luxury sales taxes; and that the next General Assembly adopt a system of periodic real estate assessments under careful supervision of the State Department of Taxation, and based on a more scientific classification of property.

The Grange views with concern, the report said, the slow progress and apparently inadequate plans of the federal rural electrification program. The best means of obtaining an effective rural electrification program for Virginia is through the creation of a Rural Electric Authority with adequate powers. The need for an adequate electrification program was pointed out in the report in the following:

"Since few things will so largely contribute to raising the standards of country people as the general availability of electricity at moderate cost, the Grange believes such facilities should be considered a matter of public concern and responsibility as is now true of public education. This view is strengthened by the fact that less than one-tenth of the country people now have electricity, and that, frequently at excessive cost."

Ethiopians use drums to arouse their warriors. If they want to make them fighting mad, why don't they try saxophones.—Buffalo (N.Y.) Times.

The present outlook is that the great majority have little prospect of securing such service without public aid in rural electric line extensions."

In Days Gone By

Ten Years Ago With The Virginia Beach
News

At a meeting of the Directors of the New Ocean Casino Corporation, it was determined to make a number of changes and improvements there before next season opened, and arrangements for financing the construction work were made. The corporation expects to extend the bath houses south, taking in the space that was used last year for a picnic pavilion. The picnic pavilion will be put on top of the bath houses, which will eliminate any trouble from flies and other insects, and at the same time will provide a wonderful view of the ocean. Nothing definite has been determined regarding other changes to be made to the amusement park, but it is thought that the dance hall will be greatly enlarged and many concessions added.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Hurst sold last week to the Rockaway Land Co., of New York, four houses and nine lots between 13th and 14th Streets. The property has about fifty feet frontage on Atlantic Avenue, one hundred feet facing on 14th Street and one hundred facing 13th Street. It has not been learned definitely what the new owners will do with the property, but it is reported that extensive improvements will be made.

At a meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion, held at the home of Mrs. John Cornick, at Oceana, last Thursday, a committee composed of Messrs. Roy Smith and John Macon Cornick was appointed to attend to having a tablet made to be erected on the Memorial Plot in the Navy Yard on Armistice Day, November 11th.

Ground has been broken for another apartment house at Virginia Beach, which is to be completed within a very short time. The apartment house will contain 24 large modern apartments and will be built by Jacob Laskin, of Mount Vernon, New York, at 8th Street between Atlantic Avenue and the Ocean Front. The building will have a frontage of 50 feet on the ocean side and will be 142 feet long; it will be three stories high with a basement under the entire building. The material used in the construction of the building will be brick and stucco. It will be of a Spanish design throughout.

As the result of a meeting held last week, when seven women, representing civic and patriotic organizations, were called in conference by S. L. Slover, his suggestion that the work of arranging for a permanent and suitable memorial to mark the spot of the original landing of the English people in this country at Cape Henry was adopted. This group of women who were invited by Mr. Slover will act as a steering committee to engineer plans for the appointment of a permanent committee to handle the matter.

It was learned today that Virginia Beach will soon have a Fox Hunt Club, which is planned to be one of the best in the country. There are many foxes in this section and the lay of the land is ideal for such sport. There are many lovers of horses and dogs here and as the sport has for years been dying out in every part of the country it has been deemed wise to organize the hunters and preserve the sport that once made Virginia famous.

The State Highway Department has a force of men here testing the present condition of the concrete road between Virginia Beach and Norfolk. This road was one of the first put in under the present supervision and the department is desirous to learn how it is holding up under the heavy traffic.

The building of a flume, to take care of the overflow of Lake Rudee, and permit a crossing of the inlet, is progressing rapidly, although the windstorm last week retarded the work somewhat. An extra force of men were put on the job at once and with the work that was done Sunday very little time will be lost. The Ocean Front Realty Company is promoting the development of the South end of Virginia Beach, and will build a road across the inlet as soon as the flume is completed. This will make several miles of water front property accessible, and will, at the same time, promote more trade and travel from North Carolina.

"Insurance of individual share accounts means that our assets are considered first-class collateral for the investments of the public to the extent that this instrumentality of the Government is willing to indemnify investors against loss," said Mr. Terry. "Inasmuch as insurance is extended only to well managed thrift institutions, our association has been approved as to policies and operating methods. All withdrawable accounts now on the association's books and additions thereto are covered by insurance up to $5,000, regardless of the time they were opened and, naturally, all new accounts will be insured," Mr. Terry explained.

Substantial Reserve

"The recent financial breakdown disclosed an imperative need for the protection of long-term savings invested for income in the thrift and home-financing institutions of the country, which aggregate between $5,000,000,000, and $8,000,000,000, held by nearly 8,000,000 people, largely wage-earners," continued Mr. Terry. "This brought about the creation of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, which has a capital of $100,000,000, subscribed and paid by the Government. The Corporation is building up a substantial reserve fund from annual premiums paid by insured institutions."

Mr. Terry said that the Virginia Beach Federal Savings and Loan Association expects to be in a position to meet all home-financing demands made upon it and to render to the borrower as great a service as to the saver. The most attractive feature of the association's loan plan is the direct-reduction method by which the borrower reduces the principal of his debt by his monthly payments, paying interest on the unpaid balance only, the association secretary pointed out.

In addition to the large sums expected from public subscription to shares, the association has two other sources of funds for home financing, Mr. Terry, explained. The Federal Home Loan Bank system, of which the association is a member, affords a reservoir of credit, and in addition, all Federal associations are eligible to have the United States Treasury subscribe to its shares.

As it was, the impact of the explosion was felt over a wide area, many of the residents expressing the belief that they were in the midst of an earthquake. Many mature people in the vicinity scurried for cover in most undignified fashion, fearing further repercussions from what they knew not what.

It is expected that the youthful gang will not be so active so long as the memory of that explosion remains with them.

Unusual Attraction

Club "500", occupying the quarters of the Hygeia Club on the Ocean Drive, one mile east of the Lynnhaven Bridge, reports that the Wednesday and Saturday night dances are most successful, with a wide patronage on hand for every night's activity. A special professional floor show is imported for each Saturday night's performance, and bands of more than local reputation have been engaged to provide music for the dancers.

The Wednesday night dance, a recent innovation, caters particularly to family parties, with the Paul Jones, round and square dances featured. Modern dances, of course, are not neglected.

Capacity crowds have greeted each Saturday night's activity, and the midweek session in rapidly developing into a countywide institution.

country is the duty of all.

Lieut. Beatty spoke at length on the matter of the flag display, telling of many instances of a lack of observance on the part of Americans and contrasting this situation with the almost rabid manner in which foreigners display their flags on sky and all occasions. He urged particularly that legionnaires display flags before their homes on Armistice Day.

Aids Support of Legion

He also urged that all ex-service men in the community support wholeheartedly the American Legion and its national program. The field for such work is wide, he said, and needs the interest of all men who served under arms during the World War. His remarks on this subject were particularly appropriate, for the local post is about to undertake a new membership drive to bring back into the fold the many legionnaires who no longer are recorded on the post's roster.

A short business session preceded the speaking, which was followed by refreshments served on the porch of the clubhouse.

HUNTING SEASON GETS UNDER WAY TODAY; REVISED LAWS ARE NOTED

Wild Fowl Plentiful in County, Game Warden Guy Salmon Reports.

DRASTIC REGULATIONS CONTROL BIRD HUNTING

Bag Limits and Shooting Hours Are Curtailed; Sink Boxes Outlawed.

Reporting game to be more plentiful in the woods and along the shore of Princess Anne county than in three or four years, Guy Salmon, of Back Bay, State Game Warden, this week announced the seasonal hunting dates and explained in detail the Federal regulations concerning the shooting of migratory birds. Mr. Salmon succeeded Wallace Carmean in his new position on October 1. Mr. Carmean being transferred to Chesterfield county to take up similar work.

The open season on bear, deer, dove, fox, opossum, raccoon, rail, sora and squirrel has already started, and hunters have reported fair luck in the opening days of the season, Mr. Salmon stated. Today, the season on quail, rabbit, turkeys and woodchuck will open while on Wednesday, November 20, the season on brant, coots, ducks, geese and snipe will get under way.

Wild Fowl Plentiful

Practically all wild fowl are plentiful this year, the game warden continued, especially geese, many flocks being reported along the coast within the past two weeks.

In order to assist sportsmen to understand what is required of them under the provisions of the Federal regulations governing the taking of migratory game birds, the Biological Survey has offered the following simplified interpretation:

Interpretation Offered

The migratory bird hunting stamp, which may be purchased at postoffices for $1, is required to be carried on the person of any individual over 16 years of age who is engaged in hunting wild ducks, wild geese or brant. It is necessary before hunting waterfowl for the hunter to validate the stamp by writing his signature across the face in ink. The stamp is not required by those who hunt woodcock or mourning doves. The money received from the sale of stamps is used to purchase and improve sanctuaries for waterfowl, last season's funds amounting to nearly $650,000.

Cooperation of Princess Anne Residents Sought by Group In Charge of Investigation: Permanent Photographic Exhibit Planned for Richmond.

Tucked away in odd corners of this county are many historic landmarks, ancient and venerable structures about which are woven many a tale of historic significance and romance. For the most part, they have been little advertised, and few are the residents of Princess Anne who could account with any degree of accuracy for the number or location of those items which connect us so realistically with the past.

Believing that a permanent exhibit of each and every building or structure of one hundred or more years of age will add to the interest of Virginia's tourist traffic, it is the plan of a society newly organized in Richmond to create such an exhibit in the capital city, a photographic record of all that is old, open at all times to the general public without cost. Selecting those sites most appealing to their individual tastes, it is believed that such a display of antiquities will go far toward increasing tourist interest in the State as well as to bring to public notice many structures thus far hidden because of inadequate information concerning them.

Cooperation Sought

This newspaper has been asked to cooperate with the society in the finding of such structures here in Princess Anne. When the list has been checked for accuracy and interest, permission will be sought to photograph these items and to include them in the permanent

OCEANA BAZAAR IS SUCCESSFUL

Approximately $300 Collected From Gala Three-Night Celebration.

The annual Parent-Teachers' Bazaar, held in the Oceana High School last week, was the most successful such affair ever given in the county, according to reports received this week. More than $300 was collected from admission tickets and the rental of booths, which marks an increase of approximately $50 over the receipts of last year.

In all, more than 1200 persons attended the three-night session of the Bazaar, with the greatest attendance set on the last night, when the Lerner Style Show was presented, with local girls acting as models for the display of all-purpose gowns. The baby style review, given on the first night, drew another large crowd, with the Cinderella Baby Shop acting as host.

Amateur Night Featured

Amateur Night, the feature of last Thursday night's program, revealed considerable talent of an engaging nature in the county. Although attendance on this night was cut by the rain, a splendid time was enjoyed by all.

Rhythmic Band Plays

The rhythmic band, under the direction of Miss Eleanor Bryant, played several numbers and was received enthusiastically.

E. N. MacWilliams was in charge of the Amateur Night performance and the following were awarded prizes: Norma Jean Britt and Dewey Rodger, Margaret White and Geraldine Midgett, Ruby and Marion Culbreth, Virginia Rau and Edith Peele.

STATE POLITICS MOVES TO FORE: BYRD'S MACHINE IS THREATENED

Entrance of Non-Organization Candidates Into Race Promises Battle.

Portsmouth Publisher to Oppose Darden; Glass' Re-election is Certain.

Now that the county elections are safely over and discussion in that quarter quieted, the politically-minded turn to the State and national elections that will occupy the centre of the stage during 1936. Here is a most fertile field for speculation, and, slowly, the stage is being set for one of the most interesting campaigns that the Old Dominion has witnessed in many a year.

Although we are warned that nothing in this life is certain other than death and taxes, the return of Carter Glass, the grand old man of Virginia politics, to the United States Senate is a matter not to be disputed. Only the Senator's unforeseen demise or his own determination to quit public life can alter the fact of his continuance as the State's senior leader in the upper house of the Congress. Whatever opposition may be presented will be no more than a loose straw before the wind.

Roosevelt's Return Assured

Nationally, President Roosevelt's return to office for a second four-year term seems equally certain.

A disorganized and leaderless Republican party has been able to produce no serious opposition thus far, and now that Huey Long is gone, the threat of a third party lies too deeply buried to suggest resurrection. Though not so popular in certain quarters as he was three years ago, Mr. Roosevelt's renomination and reelection appear certain.

But with those two offices out of the way, certainty in State politics ends. Lieutenant-governor James H. Price has announced his candidacy for the office now held by George Peery and, though there has been no announcement

COUNTY MEETING SET FOR TONIGHT

Be Brought to Close With Oceana Rally.

This evening, in the auditorium of the Oceana High School, a countywide meeting of parents and teachers will be held in the interests of National Education Week with John E. Martin, of Suffolk, president of the Virginia Education Association, the principal speaker. Pupils of the county schools will participate in the program.

The aim of National Education Week is to bring to parents and the general public an understanding of the modern curricula and to strive for a community cooperation looking to the betterment of the local schools. Special programs have been held in each of the schools during the past week, and many parents have availed themselves of the opportunity to view, at first hand the type of instruction now being offered to the growing boy and girl.

With those two offices out of the way, certainty in State politics ends. Lieutenant-governor James H. Price has announced his candidacy for the office now held by George Peery and, though there has been no announcement

Achievement Day's Plans Being Made

Indications from the 4-H Club meetings that have been held within recent weeks point to a splendid Achievement Day celebration on November 23. Practically all of the club members have completed their records and have turned them in, and they are now working on the exhibits which will be displayed and on the club stunts.

E. R. Price, editor of the Extension Bulletin, at Blacksburg, is expected to be present on Achievement Day. He will address the club members and their parents on the value of 4-H Organization.

Schools participating in other phases of the program will be Blackwater, Willoughby T. Cooke, Bayside, Charity, Creeds, Kempville, Court House and Oceana.

The general public is cordially invited to be present at tonight's

DOCTORS VOLUNTEER FREE CARE TO MOTHERS NEEDING SERVICES

Recognizing that restricted or missing incomes make no provision for medical services, the Princess Anne County Medical Society, at its regular meeting last Monday, agreed to set aside part of one day each month for the prenatal examination and instruction of women, both white and colored, who cannot afford to pay for such needed assistance.

The services of the individual physicians will be given free to expectant mothers and to newborn babies, and patients are given the opportunity to select the services of any doctor in the county that they prefer. The date for such examinations had not yet been set, but until notification of a regular schedule, women may avail themselves of this opportunity by making a convenient appointment with their regular physician.

It is open only to pupils and members of the Kempville faculty. There will be recitations, vocal and instrumental numbers, and the winners will be selected by ballot.

BOARD RESCINDS RELIEF ACTION PERMITS SURVEY OF UNEMPLOYED

Fifty-Three Families in County Given Hope of Future Relief by WPA.

KING'S DAUGHTERS GET APPROPRIATION OF $250

Additional Sum Voted For Increase to Clerk's Office; Plans Ready.

Moving to rescind the motion made and approved at a special meeting held at the Court House on November 4th relative to the investigation of relief cases in the county not approved for WPA assistance at the closing of the rolls on November 1, the board of supervisors of Princess Anne county last Monday evening, at another special meeting, reversed its former decision and approved the investigation. Mrs. A. E. Ewell, ERA director in the county, will direct the social service work, which will be paid for by Federal funds and without cost to the county.

The motion to rescind the former action of passivity was made by George W. Dawley and seconded by W. R. Payne. There were no dissenting votes, with the entire board present at the meeting with the exception of M. C. Mansfield. The motion to permit the investigation was passed by the same vote.

53 Cases On List

Fifty-three cases were on the uninvestigated list at the closing of ERA activity, with an additional fifteen applications received since that time. These latter applications, however, will not be investigated at this time, it was learned.

After hearing a report on the sanitary project now being engaged in by WPA and the U. S. Public Health Service in the county, the board voted to approve the project and to favor its continuance.

This Junior Red Cross Roll Call will be observed in the schools next week. All contributions, regardless of their size, will be welcome and will engage the child to membership during the coming year. The junior program, that of promoting an accident prevention campaign in county homes, is being followed with splendid results in both white and colored schools.

Building Project Discussed

Fred H. McGee, assistant district director of WPA, and F. W. Dunn, branch manager, appeared at the meeting to outline the sanitary project and to explain the progress made on the proposed second floor addition to the county clerk's office, which space will be used by the county agent, the home de-

Plans Made by Club for Active Participation in County Relief Work.

Making plans to participate in needed relief work in the county, the project determined upon for the coming year, the Woman's Club celebrated its tenth birthday with a gala party at the club house last Tuesday afternoon. Men and women prominent in the social life of the community were present to define the needs of the various organizations now striving to alleviate distress and to assist in the formulation of a suitable program of relief.

The meeting was a tea, and the large birthday cake was cut by Mrs. Jessie W. Hooper. Mrs. Edward H. Herbert, the new president of the club, presided.

Relief Needs Outlined

Frank M. Cox, Superintendent of Schools, presented the needs of the school children; Miss Gertrude Lovell, county nurse, spoke from the point of view of her office, and Dr. Josiah Leake, health officer, explained the health needs of the county. Others to speak were Mrs. A. E. Ewell, on behalf of the county's poverty; Mrs. Rufus Parks, on the Tuberculosis Association, and E. N. MacWilliams, for the American Red Cross.

The mortgage insurance is an important item in these loans since it insures the association against loss on any loan approved by the FHA.

"Frankly," said Mr. Terry, "we feel that the direct reduction loan which the association has been making is simpler and just as practical for the borrower as the FHA loan. However, our board of directors has decided to offer the public a choice of either plan."

The Virginia Beach Federal Savings and Loan Association is an approved mortgage under the rules of the Federal Housing Administration and as such can offer to the public FHA loans as provided in Title II of the National Housing Act. It was explained that these loans are made on a monthly basis, and the interest rate is five per cent plus one-half per cent service charge and one-half per cent for mortgage insurance.

portant item in these loans since it insures the association against loss on any loan approved by the FHA.

RELIEF AND THE LOCAL COMMUNITY

The Federal government's determination to lighten its relief load by the elimination of all direct aid grants and to function solely through the work machinery of WPA places the responsibility for direct relief upon the shoulders of the individual communities. There will be no more doles or handouts to the nation's poor sponsored by Washington. That, in effect, is the meaning of the complete transference of all relief projects from ERA to WPA, which agency has neither funds nor provisions for carrying on the distress-elimination activities of the former unit.

By no means does the Federal government dodge its responsibility by such an action. Care of the indigent, of the sick and of the unemployed always has been a purely local matter and, until the disaster of depression became so general that Federal funds were necessary to rescue these people from starvation, when the local and State machinery became inadequate to handle the gigantic task, this burden had been regarded as a local one.

Providing jobs for those able to work is one thing; dispensing charity to those for whom, for any one of a variety of reasons, no job could be found is another. Local charity is your problem and my problem—the problem of the community.

Sooner or later, the Federal government had to relinquish its role of fairy godmother to the nation's unemployed. No highly concentrated agency in Washington can hope to do justice to the problems of purely local charity with the same effectiveness and minimum expense of local organizations. Nor can local charity be visualized as a Federal job, however elastic the imagination.

We may hope that WPA will see fit to take unto itself those cases of relief involving non-registered employables in the near future, but we cannot shirk our responsibility toward those who cannot work and who live among us. An enlightened social consciousness will no longer permit us to disregard their pleas as we have done so frequently in past years, and we must embrace their problems as essentially our own.

To this end, we applaud the action of the board of supervisors for their increased contribution to the King's Daughters, an agency which is doing a splendid job in caring for the sick and ailing among the county's poor, as we applaud the proposed program of the Woman's Club during the coming year. Both agencies will be called upon to assist the needy in the approaching months.

Too, we would again bespeak support for the Red Cross, now engaged in its annual membership campaign, and support for the County Tuberculosis Association in its approaching drive. We cannot dispense with any one of these agencies, we cannot afford to hamper their activity by a curtailment of support, and it is necessary that in each instance we give to the full limit of our ability. These are the properly constituted agencies to carry on relief among the county's stricken members, and give us what we are to fulfill our obligation.

INCREASED SALARIES FOR TEACHERS

From all over the State come reports of promising young men and women teachers deserving the field of education for more financially remunerative positions in other activities. The task of educating and enlightening the Old Dominion's youth may be that for which they believe themselves best qualified, but they are forced to turn their backs upon the profession because of its inadequate returns.

Contrast this actuality with an increasing chorus of dissatisfaction on the part of parents that incompetents are, in the main, manning our school forces and that inadequate instruction—viewed from the progressiveness of other states—is here the rule, and the solution may be not so difficult of determination as some believe. "Everything has its price," said the sage Emerson, "and if that price is not paid, not that thing but something else is obtained. There can be no compromise with quality."

Virginia needs a universal nine-month school term, but it needs equally badly an attractive salary scale if we are to bring to the teaching staffs the superior type of young man and woman needed to insure highest results in our schools. No other demand, save that of feeding the hungry, is more imperative of determined action, for the very future of our nation rests in the hands of the boys and girls who today, in all too many instances, are receiving inadequate instruction because the barrier of small salaries remains.

Eliminate it, tighten the scholastic requirements and teaching ability standards of the instructor applicants and all will be well, or at least much better than is now the rule.

We are well aware that many splendid teachers grace the ranks of Virginia's educational staffs and remain there, in spite of the small remuneration, but a greater percentage of excellence would prevail were conditions better than they are today. Money is not necessarily the gauge by which we determine upon our life's work, but we cannot substitute an empty doctrine of service in any profession for an inadequate return and expect to see high standards of excellence. The experience of all humanity is against such foolish procedure.

THE AMATEUR HOUR

A farmwife from Iowa stands uncertainly before the microphone singing a popular song of the day, she is followed by a cafeteria worker, a brickmason, an unemployed printer, salesgirl and garbageman, all having their brief minute in a nationwide competition, each seeking the pot of gold that lies at the end of the trail for the successful contestant.

It is the amateur hour, a time when scores of melodies soar out upon the night air from unknown singers, boys and girls, men and women, who believe in their individual talents and who are seeking to reap the just harvest that awaits the recognized artist. Most will return to the obscurity whence they came; some will go on to indifferent success, and some few will follow the path to fortune, but all have had their opportunity. "The wheel of fortune spins 'round and 'round, and no one can tell . . ."

Although we are heartily out of sympathy with those who exploit amateur performers on commercial radio programs to eliminate the expense of bona fide talent, without offering any substantial reward to those who appear, we applaud the genuine interest in the amateur shown by Major Bowes. Listening to his weekly programs it is easy to spot real talent often of most humble origin, and it is consoling to know that because of his efforts these young people will be given the opportunity their abilities deserve. We cannot praise too highly the unselfish labor and the sympathetic understanding he brings to those who work with him each Sunday night. The heartfelt gratitude of those who listen is surpassed only by the determination to succeed which he instills in those who find employment under his direction and the opportunity to progress in the perfecting of their art because of his interest.

The rules he evokes are simple, and the judging is fair. Indeed, if it seems possible that the general public will overlook one possessing admitted talent, it is the Major's practice to lend assistance by sponsoring personally this young man or woman upon the road to theatrical opportunity. We are denied a hearing, and amazing are the results.

What we personally like best about the amateur hour is the stimulus given to everyone, whether in competition or not, to continue the study of music or one of its allied arts. Mechanical means of reproducing music have done much to still the piano and to make America an audience of listeners rather than a group of performers, but the genuine delight with which a Major Bowes greets the earnest amateur, often so because of a lack of opportunity to market his wares, is slowly causing a reawakening of interest in the pursuit of creative art. For such an accomplishment we cannot applaud him too much.

THANKS—AND PLEASE

From many sources we learn that your county newspaper is being widely read by numbers far out of proportion to the list of subscribers. Weekly issues, we are informed, enjoy a large circulation, being passed from neighbor to neighbor and perused by all.

We are flattered by such interest, and it is our wish that we can increase our service to you to a marked degree during the coming months. Not until we have succeeded in bringing some items of interest into every household in the county each week shall we believe that we are adequately illustrating the job that is cut out for us.

We shall strive to do our part.

Won't you, in return, send us your subscription? You'll enjoy the paper much more when you can read it at your leisure, unhampered by the demands of the neighbor for whom it is next intended.

AH! SUSPICION

I know you think I'm fickle, and You doubt me when I say:
"I love you, Dear—no foolin'—yes,
Each hour of every day!"

When I swear: "I'll be true to you, Honest to goodness, Sweet!"
You just give me an icy stare,
Which says I've met defeat.

Then I declare undying love.
"With you—or far apart?"
I say, and accent it with this:
"Really—I cross my heart!"

But 'cause I have boy friends galore,
I fear that you are led To think it's not my heart that's crossed.—

But my fingers, instead.

"LET THE DEAD PAST"

No good can come of living on dead bones;
Aping great shadows of the impersonal past.

While clinging to presentiments which cast

Vague, somber thoughts dying in monotones

Suggesting grave antiquity that drowns

Through dead men's songs when man may sleep at last.

Why feed on tales of old? Better to fast

While there is work. Take up no bygone loans.

Build an illusion—life's a puppet show—

Work hard at something while the present breathes.

If you have health and loved ones, and brave trees

To bud anew—the future need you know?

Inscrutable the heritage life weaves

Through past and future. Fates four winds must blow.

ANOTHER WORD TO MOTORISTS

Some years ago, before highway motor accidents had reached the staggering totals of today, the Richmond-Petersburg road was placarded with multitudinous warnings of a religious nature which admonished the passersby, among other such cryptic remarks to " Beware—Death lurks Around the Next Corner." A so-called religious fanatic had been responsible for those eerie observations in a day when motoring was not a wild flirtation with Death, but, if we could have our way, similar signs would border every highway in this State today, placed there with the hope that feet would automatically let up on the accelerator and force more careful attention to the road, even as we reduced speed and kept our eyes glued on the concrete in those days of yesteryear when we happened to glance at one of those cliff-provoking bits of painted tin.

When the all-time record of motor fatalities for this year is posted, you and I, Mr. and Mrs. Motoring Public, may well drop to our knees and thank whatever gods there be for bringing us through alive and with the use of all our limbs. For we have ridden with Death, as surely as he would stalk by our sides were we today engaged in armed combat. We have escaped for yet another year. Will we be so fortunate in the next twelve months? The odds are against it.

Such a method of control, we assert, will not entirely eliminate the hazards of the road, but it will cut accidents to the point where driving will become more of a pleasurable diversion and not the mad flirtation with Death which it is today. We shall lose none by such a tempering of speed, and we shall save many lives by such same action.

Director of Motor Vehicles Rhodes has not advocated the use of governors, but has placed his faith in uniformed policemen. Additional traffic officers undoubtedly would be of material assistance, but we cannot line our highways with such officers, and speed will not be reduced so long as the familiar blue and grey uniform is not in evidence.

There is no more practical solution than that advocated in these columns. Control may be distasteful to many of us, but we have proven ourselves no better than children in the manipulation of our dangerous "toys" and, as we substitute blank cartridges in Johnnie's gun for the real thing he demands, so must we, no more than overgrown children, submit to the control of governors. We'll do it sooner or later. We might as well place in evidence a bit of that boasted Virginia progressiveness before we are forced to follow the lead of another state.

Indian bucks on the reservations of Oklahoma were suddenly enriched several years ago by the locating of oil and gas deposits on their lands. The story is told that they couldn't get to an automobile dealer fast enough, once the down payment check was in their hands, to place their orders for a red Stutz roadster, in those days the most powerful car on the road. Most of these cars came to a sudden and untimely end by wrapping themselves around a tree or culvert, often within a few hours after their delivery, but the owners were satisfied—they had experienced all of the savagery of their ancestors, plus the modern blessing of speed.

As we behold the highway situation today, we are moved to wonder just what percentage of untamed Indian there is in eight out of every ten drivers.

A defense lawyer sang "Home Sweet Home" to a jury in the southwestern range country and his client got free. Maybe he forgot his guitar—Atlanta Constitution.

Maybe we who are the world's foolish would then listen to the voice of reason. In the meantime, the three modern musketeers of the road—speed, carelessness and liquor—go madly on their way.

But the time has come to forego talking and to press for action. The licensing laws and those governing regular inspection of motor vehicles must be rigidly enforced, full and drastic penalties must be meted out to those found guilty of driving under the influence of intoxicants, whether embroiled in accidents or not at the time of their arrest, and one more step must be taken, the only answer to the modern speed craze—the placing of governors upon every truck and passenger car sold within the borders of the Old Dominion.

Already we hear the yell and roars of a speed-and-painful, but the time is surely coming when such action will be taken universally and some state must lead the procession.

We now propose that the next session of the Virginia legislature show the way to her sister commonwealths by the enactment of the necessary laws.

Such a system of control has been advocated from time to time by everyone concerned with highway fatalities as the most suitable—if not the only—way to reduce accidents. It has been pointed out that manufacturers could include such governors as standard equipment on cars shipped into this state at little or no extra cost, and the forced use of such cars already operating here would entail slight expense to the motorist.

Our own experience would suggest that the speed of passenger vehicles be limited to not more than 50 or 55 miles per hour. For trucks, depending upon the size and controllability, a graduated scale of not more than 30 miles per hour for the largest vans and not more than 40 miles per hour for the lighter vehicles. Buses should not be permitted to travel at a greater speed than 35 miles per hour.

Such a method of control, we assert, will not entirely eliminate the hazards of the road, but it will cut accidents to the point where driving will become more of a pleasurable diversion and not the mad flirtation with Death which it is today. "BILLY" SUNDAY

Nothing like a comprehensive study could be made of American life during the last thirty years or so without taking into account the Rev. William A. Sunday, "Billy" Sunday. For not only is it indisputably true that he was for a number of years one of the most widely publicized and often quoted men in America, but it is indisputably true that he exerted his peculiar influence upon hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of persons who crowded the auditoriums in which he appeared. It was because he drew such huge audiences that it was necessary to build the School Board and the City Council, requesting them to "order" the teachers, who are "paid by taxpayers' money . . . to refrain from expressions of personal opinions on principles of government." It is expressly noted that this is not intended as a criticism of the teachers of Norfolk's public schools, who are known as true and loyal citizens of the United States.

Since the resolution directs that a copy of the protest be supplied to the press, we assume that comment from the press is invited. Our comment in "Horse feathers!" We think we know what kind of teachers the Norfolk schools employ. The idea that any of them is engaged in proselytizing for Communism is too fantastic for belief.

One Forty-and-Eighter, it is reported, was "dumbfounded" when his young daughter, a public school pupil, attempted to discuss with him "the good points of Communism." Did she also undertake to discuss with him its bad points? Communism has both. It is the business of instructors of classes mature enough to be taught the world's different forms of political organizations, to describe the salient characteristics of Fascism, Communism, Socialism, Totalitarianism, Nazism and Monarchism as well as of Republicanism. The examination of the good and bad aspects of each form of government is legitimately part of such instruction. The very act of designating points as good and bad requires on the part of the instructor an expression of opinion, but every instructor worth his salt knows how to keep such expression of opinion becoming an act of advocacy of any of the foreign systems under discussion.

The Virginian-Pilot does not believe that any Norfolk teacher has overstepped the line that divides exposition from advocacy, or that the admittance the Forty-and-Eight plan to address to the School Board and Council is more than a burlesque form of witch-hunting.

A mid-epidemic of this sort of thing is sweeping the country—a kind of prickly rash induced by the feverish nationalism on view on both sides of the Atlantic. Last week it was the public schools of the District of Columbia that incurred the suspicion of the witch-hunters. The charge that the school teachers of the national capital were engaged in propagating Communism has been laughed out of court. This week it is the school teachers of Norfolk. The Forty-and-Eight ought to add a new verse to the old route song. We suggest:

Le Quarante et Huit est fort parleuse, Parlez-vous.
"The teachers are Pink or Red," they say, Parlez-vous.
"So yankee 'em up to the assembly line."
"And scrub 'em hard with odine," Hinckley Dickey, Parlez-vous.
Horse feathers!—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

A young man was on trial in Chicago recently. A defense attorney told the jury that the defendant suffered from a "circular depression," that is, he was all right most of the time, but every now and then a severe emotional shock would throw him completely off his base. When that happened he would not be responsible for his acts; and since it did happen at the time of the murder complained of, the argument was that he ought to be acquitted.

Young men are an argument for acquittal. In any intelligently devised legal system, one would suppose, it would be the strongest kind of argument to keep a man locked up for the rest of his life. A man who cannot meet any emotional strain without flying so far off the handle that he is apt to commit murder would certainly seem to be one whom society ought to keep under restraint permanently.

WARM WEATHER SLOWS TRADING

Stimulus of Holiday Trade Apparent in Many Sections Of Nation.

Reports received by the Department of Commerce from widely scattered areas of the country indicated that retail trade at the end of October continued to be held back somewhat by unseasonably warm weather in many places. Practically all the 33 reporting cities, however, showed improvement over the same period of 1934.

Manufacturers and wholesalers reported that they were beginning to feel the stimulus of holiday buying with prospects for a considerable increase in business over last year. The trend was also to better quality merchandise. In many instances, orders for gift goods were 20% greater than in 1934 and difficulty in obtaining delivery was reported in some lines. New York reported earlier than normal Christmas buying in many lines with particularly heavy increases in luxury lines. A survey of Philadelphia manufacturers and wholesale firms indicated increases over last year of 22%. Reports of favorable holiday prospects were received from Boston, Atlanta, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, New Orleans, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle.

Expanding automobile production was an influence in the rising trend of industrial activity and was beginning to account for sustained production in the steel industry. Automobile units produced through October 26 totaled 153,000 compared with 96,128 for the entire month of September.

Employment gains were reported in practically all areas as WPA projects got under way, but seasonal expansion also accounted for a considerable increase in private employment.

Cotton mill activity was at a higher level, following the gains made in September. Electric power production reached a new all-time high. Lumber production eased off slightly after reaching a peak in the first half of October and stocks were considerably lower than a year ago.

Although excess bank reserves gained $80,000,000 from the previous week to 3 billion, there were evidences of increased agricultural and industrial borrowings. An upward trend in short-term interest rates was initiated in the New York market. Christmas savings accounts were reported to have greatly increased in number and size.

Building construction in 766 identical cities continued a wide margin of increase over last year, particularly in the new residential building classification. The total construction cost in these cities in September was $74,502,778, compared with $39,607,339 in the same month last year, a gain of 88.1%, while the increase in new residential building was 187.4%.

Income of $636,000,000 from farm marketings in September brought the total for the nine months of the year of $4,304,000,000. In addition, rental and benefit payments of $406,000,000 made total cash of $4,710,000,000 received this year, compared with $4,453,000,000 for the same period last year. As a result, the estimated cash increase for the year has been raised to $6,800,000.

Radio Dramatist Presents Big Forest Estate To Public

Radio Dramatist Presents Big Forest Estate To Public

ONE of the most beautiful wood-land estates in Eastern Canada has been dedicated to the public by its owner, Merrill Denison, creator and director of outstanding dramatic features for both the National and Columbia Radio Broadcasting Systems. The estate, known as Bon Echo, comprises about 10 square miles of lake and forest country in the heart of eastern Ontario, 60 miles northeast of Belleville, which is on the main motor highway between Toronto and Montreal. The property is conservatively estimated to be worth $500,000.

In offering the gift to Ontario, Mr. Denison requested that it be used both as an experimental forestry station and as a summer recreation area for residents of and visitors to the province. Premier Miller of Ontario accepted the gift, and Denison, that his wishes will be carried out and has promised the erection of a forestry station on the property. The layout covers a portion of the Bon Echo Paliades and (inset) the donor, Merrill Denison.

BOOKS TO OWN

By Frederick Lewis Allen

Harpers. 473pp. $3.00

A Review by Frank McLean, English Department, Norfolk Branch, the College of William and Mary.

"The Lords of Creation" is an attempt to tell in one coherent and consecutive narrative the course of American finance from the inception of the United States Steel Corporation in 1900 down to the collapse in 1929, with as much of the aftermath as was evident by the beginning of the past summer. Mr. Allen has added little or nothing to what has been said by a number of other writers, but he is, I think, the first to bring the widely scattered personalities and influences together within one volume. The result is that one's perspective is improved, and one feels a little clearer about the events of that part of the twentieth century which is now behind us.

It is an interesting fact, and one which is very gratifying for that sort of mind that likes to deal with numbers, that it was in December, 1900, when Charles M.

Schwab and the late J. Pierpont Morgan, with others of lesser note came together to organize the Steel Trust. With the founding of that vast corporation a new era began in our industrial annals. The country was just emerging from a depression; men were beginning to spend once more, business was optimistic; the government was safely Republican after the Bryan crusades; and every body was ready for the expected boom. The only fly in the ointment was the fear of the people for giant enterprises.

For the first two decades of the century the battle was always going on between those who saw in the trust the solution of all the problems of efficiency and economy so repugnant to the lover of dividends, and those who regarded the trusts as the last word in the combination of wealth and power of the common man. Laws and more laws against combinations in restraint of trade were passed by national and state legislative bodies. But always the shrewd corporation lawyer was at least one step ahead of the lawmakers, as Mr. Allen points out. Then, with the war boom, the big corporations came into the fullness of their glory. Tricks and expedients developed during the first part of the period were now employed for all they were worth. Such devices as the holding company, non-voting stocks, long term bonds (one company issued bonds which will not mature for nearly a thousand years), and subsidiary corporations made it not only difficult to fix responsibility, but also tempted business men to get entirely out of their depth in their wild scramble for profits. The public, educated to investing in securities through the sale of Liberty Bonds and other war issues, as well as by the less ethical propaganda of brokers and bankers, rushed to provide the wool needed for the shearing. The result was the crash of 1929, with the subsequent collapse of the banks and the stalemate since existing.

Mr. Allen has told all this story with clarity and wealth of detail which never seems to grow monotonous in spite of the many cases of parallelogram. Some of his people are engaging rascals: some of them are coldblooded egoists who might, as machines, be admirable, but as men are really pitiful; most of them, especially of the more recent past, are, in their private capacities, rather pleasant gentlemen, but, as business men, are too much blinded by the system to realize their frequent departures from the paths of sound economics and plain honesty. As one of them pathetically remarked when urged for an explanation of his activities, "It was the atmosphere." "The Lords of Creation" is full of this atmosphere.

No one will be entirely satisfied with the final portion of the book, in which Mr. Allen attempts to give an unbiased evaluation of the efforts of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Roosevelt to cope with the situation into which the "Lords" had done so much to bring us. For one thing, the radicals will think he is too lenient and the conservatives will think he is too harsh in his findings. Perhaps Mr. Allen will agree that we are still too close to the facts to see them in their exact relationship. However, his summary is thought provoking and, on the whole, fair. Whether it will keep any lambs from further slaughter must, of course, remain to be seen.

At the beginning of our nation, two ideas as to where the nation's power and wealth should be centered battled in the political arena. The ideas were fostered by Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton: Jefferson stood for the rights of small citizens based upon a distribution of real property; Hamilton for industrialization and the concentration of wealth in a few hands. Developments of Hamilton's policy formed the basis of our economic crisis. Now, where? In the swing of the pendulum away from the Hamiltonian idea there is danger of completely reverting to the other extreme. And, as Herbert Agar in "Land of the Free", points out, Jefferson's theory, unadulterated, is too Utopian for a working plan. Mr. Agar advocates apportioning out public utilities to the State, leaving large manufacturing and mining enterprises to private ownership until further notice, and apparently everything else to the little fellow. Mr. Agar does not evidence much admiration for cities and "civilization," but reserves his praise for the shearing. The result was the crash of 1929, with the subsequent collapse of the banks and the stalemate since existing.

In seeking to steer a middle course, Mr. Agar agrees with the policies of Benjamin T. Ely and Frank Bohn in "The Great Change," but over the extent of State's responsibility and other economic points these middle courses split. Though this last may be more scientific, certainly, for the popular taste, Mr. Agar's book is the more readable and thought-provoking of the two.

Valuable Prizes

Many valuable prizes were awarded each evening. Mrs. W. S. McKenna won a permanent wave, Mrs. Charles Cashman and Mrs. J. E. Garrett facials and Miss Margaret Larson a finger wave. Mrs. A. A. Booth and Mrs. Peter Dyer won cakes. Mrs. R. H. Timblerake a pie and Mrs. J. E. Garrett a table lamp. Free laundry service was won by Mrs. W. H. McCann and Mrs. A. A. Booth. Betty Newbern won a turkey and Mrs. Oscar Land an afghan.

Two baskets of groceries and a ham were won by O. B. Capps, Miss Elizabeth Baum and Mrs. Cooper, respectively. Flour was awarded to B. B. Bland and Joseph Larson.

Only Outside Event

The annual bazaar is the only outside event sponsored by the Oceanside schools. Instead of appealing to the public for funds on a series of occasions, it was believed worthwhile to concentrate upon one mammoth production each school year, and the idea of the bazaar was agreed upon. Results have shown the course to be a splendid one, and the general school fund has been increased materially each year by the support given to the function.

Baskets were unusually attractive this year, and the cooperation of local and Norfolk merchants was appreciated by those responsible for the bazaar.

Association to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of the Oceanside Parent-Teacher Association will be held next Tuesday afternoon, at 3:15 o'clock. It was announced yesterday. Reports on the bazaar will be presented, and other business of importance to the organization will be discussed.

Preceding the general session, the executive committee will convene at the school at 2 o'clock.

WOMAN'S GROUP WILL AID NEEDY

(Continued from Page One) A benefit campaign which will be conducted during this month to enroll more of the county women in the club. All women are eligible for membership, and are asked to join the present members in their project of relief.

The December meeting of the club will be a Christmas party for the underprivileged children of the county. Mrs. Charles M. Hodman is the chairman.

Charity Observes Education Week

In observance of American Education Week, the Charity School presented the following programs from Monday through Thursday:

Monday—playlet, "A Friendship Tour." Mr. Cox discussed the educational theme for the year, and a silver tea was sponsored by the Junior League, proceeds from which will be used to purchase reading materials.

Tuesday's program consisted of a playlet, songs and readings to show the interdependence of nations.

Local reports on the Federal government's activity in financing education in emergencies were given by the students on Wednesday.

Yesterday's program was presented in the nature of a play based on the importance of reading good books and the part the school has in the social changes in the community.

Today's attention will be focused on the meeting which will be held in the Oceanside High School tonight, in the interest of a better understanding of the county's schools.

Must Administer Adjustment Only

Corn-Hog Supervisors for Princess Anne county will meet at the Norfolk office next Wednesday in a supervisors' school, in conjunction with Norfolk and Nansemond counties. The object of the school is to offer instruction in the proper methods of completing the forms on contracted farms. So far as possible, the same supervisors who checked compliance of the corn acreage in June will be used for the hog check next month.

A letter explaining the method of checking hogs and announcing the latest compliance rulings has been sent to all county farmers who have signed corn-hog contracts. Mr. Osbin stated this week.

Action upon their proposal that an additional $110 be appropriated by the county to insure the full amount of the county's share of the expense incidental to the completion of the proposed building, bringing the subscribed amount to $2610, was approved by the board, with W. F. Hudspeth dissenting. The Federal government's share of the building costs will run to $6999. It is anticipated that actual work on the project will be begun shortly.

Appropriation to King's Daughters

In response to a spirited plea made by officers of the King's Daughters, the board, on a motion by Mr. Payne, which was seconded by Mr. Hudspeth, voted to appropriate $250 to the Norfolk welfare organization for the coming year. This action increases last year's local appropriation by $100 and will permit the continuance of the splendid work now being done in Princess Anne county by the King's Daughters.

Miss Gertrude Lovell, county nurse, pointed out that an average of sixteen county boys and girls are cared for weekly by the clinic sponsored by this group. During the past several months, an estimated thirty tonsillectomy operations have been performed on county residents, and doctors engaged by the group have been in attendance at a dozen deliveries.

In addition to this humane assistance, instruction has been given on pre-and post-natal care of mothers, on the health of babies and children, and some attempt has been made to check the spread of social diseases.

Continuation of this work is distinctly worthwhile, and the increased contribution to the King's Daughters has been commended upon most favorably by county residents.

The medical attention given to the county's needy is not available elsewhere, and the beneficial results accomplished could not be purchased for many times the amount voted by the supervisors.

All in all, this meeting was most valuable in its results, particularly from the point of view of the advance of social service work in the county.

Theater Previews

AT THE BAYNE

The thrill and romance of naval officers in the making, men who in peace or in war, heroically brave death for their country in their line of duty, is colorfully depicted in the new Warner Bros. Cosmopolitan drama-with-music, "Shipmates Forever," which is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Bayne Theatre today and tomorrow, November 15 and 16. Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler head the cast which includes Lewis Stone, Ross Alexander, Johnny Arledge and others.

To marry for money or love . . . that's the ticklish question Joan Crawford has to answer in her sparkling new romantic comedy, "I Live, My Life," which comes Sunday and Monday, November 17 and 18, to the Bayne Theatre. The supporting cast includes Frank Morgan, Alice MacMahon, Fred Kasten and others.

Maureen O'Sullivan plays the feminine lead in "The Bishop Misbehaves," Metro's filmization of the Broadway mystery-comedy hit. The noted English star, Edmund Gwenn, is seen as the eccentric bishop with a love for amateur sleuthing, and Norman Foster plays an innocent bystander who gets caught in the web of both mystery and romance. This picture will be shown Tuesday, November 19.

"The Iron Duke," Gaumont British production starring George Arliss as Wellington, and dealing with the Hundred Days cycle of Bonaparte. Napoleon's fall from power and his final defeat on the plains of Waterloo, comes to the Bayne Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, November 20 and 21. Gladys Cooper appears as the Duchess of Angouleme, Edmund Willard is seen as Marshal Ney and Lesley Waring as Lady Frances Webster.

Jimmie Frank Stars On Augusta Eleven

Jimmy Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank, of Virginia Beach, now a student at Augusta Military Academy, is proving himself to be a football player of prowess, according to published reports which reach this office from time to time. Last Saturday, Jimmie starred in the 13-0 upset which he and his teammates scored against Woodberry Forest.

Last year, it will be recalled, Jimmie played end for the Oceanside team, but the coaches at Augusta have shifted him to the right half position, where he has been playing a splendid game all season. He is expected to be a big factor in Augusta's coming games with Staunton and Fishburn.

STATE'S MUSEUM NEARLY FINISHED

Fine Arts Building Construction in Richmond at No Cost to Virginia.

The Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, in Richmond, virtually completed, was officially turned over to the board of Directors by the Virginia Art Commission under whose supervision the museum has been constructed, at exercises at the museum last Saturday. Thomas C. Colt, Jr., is museum curator.

Directors who received the museum, many of whom attended the ceremonies, are former Governor John Garland Pollard, Mrs. Jessie Ball duPont, John Stewart Pleasant L. Reed, Webster S. Rhoads, Miss Catherine Rhoads, Mrs. Hildreth Dunn Scott, Blythe Branch, Alexander W. Weddell, Mrs. Virginia Chase Weddell, Eppa Hunton IV, E. Randolph Williams, Dr. Douglas Vanner Hoof, Robert W. Daniel, Henry W. Anderson, Jay W. Johns, General W. H. Cooke, Mrs. Corrine L. Melchers, Mrs. Thelma Cudiff Whitman, and John Miller, Jr.

Officials Represented

Ex-officio members of the board are the governor of Virginia, the Lieutenant-governor, the speaker of the House of Delegates, and the mayor of the city of Richmond.

The museum, which was built by Doyle and Russell, Richmond contractors and builders, at a cost of $281,500, including a federal grant of $77,500, is two stories in height, with the entrance on a level between the first and second floors, so arranged as to give about equal importance to each of the two stories.

On the first, or ground, floor are located the mechanical plant, receiving, boxing, and packing rooms, general storage space, live storage for pictures not on exhibition in the galleries, arranged for use by students at all times, a board room, used also for exhibitions of recent acquisitions or objects for admission, a small assembly room, and an exhibition gallery.

Large Entrance Hall

The assembly room is equipped with regular gallery lighting and may be used for the display of pictures as well as for assembly purposes.

The entrance level has a large entrance hall extending through the second story, with a rather severe and carefully studied wall treatment. It is faced with stone up to the second floor level, with plaster above and an enriched plaster ceiling. Architectural embellishments of the interior have been confined to this main entrance hall and to the sculpture hall on the second floor. The galleries have been kept severely plain in order to afford the most unobtrusive background for the pictures. On this intermediate level are located the offices for the director and his administration staff, coat rooms, public telephones, catalogues, sales space, etc.

On the second floor the central feature is the sculpture hall, with flanking galleries for smaller sculpture, bronzes, etc. Grouped about this hall are five large picture galleries and three small ones. The sculpture hall and its flanking galleries, when the whole building is completed, will form the "grand concourse" of the structure and the interior of these rooms has an architectural treatment indicative of its future position in the general scheme.

Monumental Stairway

Access between floors is by a monumental stairway of stone with wrought iron railing, extending from the first floor to the entrance hall and so up to the second floor, opening from its upper landing directly into the sculpture hall.

A freight elevator and service stairs are provided.

The building is equipped with complete heating, ventilating, and airconditioning equipment, with humidity control.

Great care has been expended upon the lighting of the galleries. The general scheme is a combination of artificial (trough) lighting and skylights, but some of the galleries have trough lighting and windows. This variance gives wide flexibility as to quantity and quality of light required for particular objects or pictures.

The main sculpture hall is lighted through lunettes and at night by lights behind the glass of these windows and by concealed coke lighting over the cornice.

ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAM READY

Activity Expected to Resume In County Before End of This Month.

With 1270 Virginia school teachers ready to carry on the Emergency Education Program of WPA on a state-wide scale, Blair Buck, director of the program under ERA and for WPA announced yesterday that the new projects would be underway as soon as the necessary preliminary paper work could be completed. The program, according to Mr. Buck, will be resumed in the various cities and counties in the order of the relative number of unemployed teachers certified to participate in the projects.

Meanwhile, advices at the WPA headquarters were to the effect that 1270 Virginia teachers were reported to have been certified as eligible for relief employment as of November 2, also that 800 teachers are carrying on the former ERA education emergency program on a volunteer basis until the various projects can be shifted over to WPA.

Discussing the new set-up, Director Buck voiced the hope that by the end of November division school superintendents will be authorized to put to work the qualified unemployed teachers in their divisions for whom classes can be provided.

The emergency education program includes nursery schools, adult, elementary, and vocational rehabilitation classes.

Work to Resume Here

In Princess Anne county, according to Superintendent of Schools F. W. Cox, twenty-four classes have been tentatively organized and sent to Richmond for approval.

The classes to be conducted in the county this year will follow closely the activity of the past season, with elementary education for adults featured.

Mr. Cox is hopeful that the educational program will get under way within the next week or two.

WE DRIVERS

A Series of Brief Discussions on Driving, Dedicated to the Safety, Comfort and Pleasure of the Motoring Public. Prepared by General Motors

NO. 2—NIGHT DRIVING

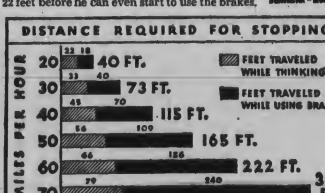

It's just as easy as can be that when people get expert at anything they're apt to begin getting careless about it; and that's what we have to look out for when driving our cars. For instance, we recently heard a group of engineers discussing night driving, and one thing they kept talking about was "over-driving our headlights."

Now that term seems to be a common one with them, but it's new to most of us.

What they mean is that the distance the car can see clearly by headlights is, of course, limited, and that we are apt to let our car speeds get beyond the point where we could easily stop within that limited distance. It's true that we naturally tend to go a little slower at night, but if we do, we gradually get into trouble. You see, momentum, the same force that tries to keep us from making turns safely; that cuts all kinds of corners on slippery roads . . . never sleep! He works on the same old principles night and day. Darkness doesn't hinder him, but it hinders us.

Most modern headlights are pretty good at night, though. You'll find all the latest types give the distance lighted up over on the road . . . perhaps one of those big lumbering trucks that have no lights at all have gone out on them; or a car whose lights have gone out . . . an unexpected curve, that's what not.

And that's where we meet up with momentum again. You see, stopping isn't the one simple action we always thought it was. The truth is, we are told, that there are really three things we have to do to stop. First we have to get over on to the brake pedal. And then we have to push down on the brake pedal. Now we might not believe it, but they tell us those first two steps take time. Less than a second, perhaps, but even in that instant momentum is carrying us on. In fact, at only 20 miles an hour the average driver goes 22 feet before he can even start to use the brakes,

Then after he gets the brakes to working, it takes him another 18 feet to stop completely, even with the best brakes in the world and with good tires, under favorable road conditions. At least so we are told by the State Board of Public Works of one of the states which has made a very intensive study of drivers and driving conditions, and which has prepared the data for the above chart.

The most important thing to realize is that distance needed to stop increases a great deal as we increase our speed.

We just have to remember that when we're moving along in a car, we think by the foot, act by the foot and stop by the foot, and if we aren't careful, it's easy to get going faster than is really safe.

Now, just as engineers have told us how to operate in safety with our own lights, many experienced drivers have learned to depend on other people's lights. They say that all we have to do when passing other cars at night is to stop looking at their lights and watch the right-hand side of the road.

The truth of the matter is that night driving can be just as pleasant and just as safe as day driving. But we have to be more alert and more careful.

In Days Gone By Ten Years Ago With The Virginia Beach News

Work started Tuesday on preparing the grounds for the construction of Virginia Beach's first large hotel, which has been needed for many years. Herman Drinkwater has the contract for the necessary grading, and Lawson Co. of Norfolk, was awarded the contract to build the concrete road extending from the present Virginia Beach to Cape Henry road, to the site upon which the million dollar hotel will be built.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Knights of Pythias of Virginia Beach and vicinity was held at the Castle Hall on Thursday evening last. After a short business session the brethren retired to MacPhail's restaurant where a very tempting banquet was served.

The suit brought by the Sun Rise Development Corporation against the State of Virginia has been the center of interest and talk for some time and the case is now set to be tried December 16th, in the Circuit Court of the City of Richmond, deposition will be taken on the eleventh of November.

The Oceana High School girl's basketball team defeated the Virginia Beach girl's team, Monday night in a hard-fought game, in the Fair building at Oceana, by a score of 26 to 12. A large number of people witnessed the game and both teams played a splendid game.

May Gimbart starred for Oceana and Frances Herrick was the outstanding player for the Beach team.

Hallowe'en merrymakers made unusually merry on Saturday night in Oceana. Gates were removed, the school back steps were torn down and windows were painted by gayly dressed and highly painted crowds which consisted chiefly of the children of the neighborhood, a few of the grownups accompanying them to prevent the fun from taking a destructive turn. No real harm was done and all returned to their homes happy, but worn out from the unusual exertion.

It is thought the man had been in the water about three days, having been washed overboard from

Poultry Groups Ready for Show

Annual Exposition in New York Will Be Bigger and Better Than Ever.

James E. Rice, president of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council, which represents thirteen eastern States from Maine to Virginia, has made public the names of a Committee of Patrons for the Poultry Industries Exposition, headed by: Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York City, Governor Louis J. Brann of Maine, Governor Theodore F. Green of Rhode Island, Governor George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, Governor H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and some thirty others distinguished in public service. The Poultry Industries Exposition will be held in Commerce Hall, Port Authority Building, in New York City, from February 4 to 8, inclusive.

The exposition will combine for the first time the interests of the producer, distributor and consumer, and will display to commercial poultrymen and laymen alike the supplies, equipment and services vital to the poultry industry. Federal and state governments, state departments of agriculture, agriculture colleges and numerous other poultry and agricultural organizations are preparing graphic representations for the exposition.

Committee of Patrons

The complete list of members of the Committee of Patrons, as announced by Professor Rice, includes, in addition to those previously mentioned: Senator Joseph G. Guffey, Pennsylvania; Senator Augustine Loerger, Connecticut; Senator W. Warren Barbour, New Jersey; Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, Rhode Island; Senator David I. Walsh, Massachusetts; Senator Rush D. Holt, West Virginia; Senator Royal S. Copeland, New York; Walter F. Krome, president, Standardized Poultry Association; H. A. Nourse, president, American Poultry Association; Roger B. Corbett, Senior Extension Economist, Agricultural Economics Section, U. S. Department of Agriculture; William Fellowes Morgan, Commissioner, Department of Markets, Weights and Measures, New York; W. I. Myers, Governor of Farm Credit Administration.

Already with the show still three months away, some 50 exhibitors are preparing displays and demonstrations which will include exhibits of feed and drinking equipment, portable houses, incubators, litter and nest materials, coal, gas, electric, wood and oil brooders, feeds, egg grading and candling machines, commercial hatcheries, metal nests, fencing, and various other equipment and services for the poultry producer.

All-Inclusive Show

"The Poultry Industries Exposition will be the first of its kind held in the United States," said Professor Rice. "The unique feature that distinguishes this particular exposition from the familiar poultry show is its all-inclusive character, since in this exposition are combined for the first time all the different branches of the poultry industry. It is an exposition featuring the production, distribution and consumption of poultry and poultry products. It will demonstrate to both country and city people every phase of the poultry industry: how poultry and eggs are produced, transported, handled, sold—how they are cooked and served in the most improved manner. This series of displays and demonstrations will involve the use of the most modern commercial equipment for the efficient management of poultry, and the sanitary methods employed for protection against diseases and parasitic enemies, including vaccination, blood testing of poultry, disinfecting of buildings and equipment, and protection against theft."

World's Safest Truck Driver Honored

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Governor

Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, presented National Safety Council's trophy to Charley Thomas, of Baltimore, world's safest truck driver, at the National Safety Congress which closed here October 18th. Thomas received the Council's award on behalf of the Atlantic Refining Company, which placed first among petroleum truck feets with a record of 83,000 miles per accident, the safest fleet of its kind in America. Thomas himself, in 26 years of driving, covering more than 500,000 miles, has never had an accident. Closest he ever came was with a team of horses in 1910 when one of the horses nipped a lady's hand as she tried to feed it sugar. Trucks, says Charley, are safer than horses because trucks don't bite.

4-H CLUBS PLAN VARIED PROGRAM FOR SATURDAY'S ANNUAL MEETING

E. R. Price, of Blacksburg, to deliver Principal Address At Ocean.

LARGE ATTENDANCE OF MEMBERS AND PARENTS IS ANTICIPATED BY COUNTY AGENT.

The seven community 4-H Clubs of Princess Anne county will stage their annual Achievement Day exercises in the auditorium of the Ocean High School tomorrow, beginning at 10 a. m. More than three hundred members of the organization are expected to be on hand for the ceremonies, accompanied by their parents and numerous friends of the future farmers' movement.

E. R. Price, editor of the Extension Bulletin, Blacksburg, will be the principal speaker and will address the session on the subject, The Value of 4-H Organization. Other addressees will be delivered by G. A. Elcan, State boys' club leader, and F. S. Farrar, district agent. Awards and prizes will be presented by H. W. Ozlin, county agricultural agent.

Exhibits Featured

Exhibits of the individual members and of the club projects will be among the outstanding items of the program, and will be surpassed only by the actual presentation of prizes and awards won during the past year.

$190, it was learned, will be awarded in cash prizes tomorrow. In addition to this, an Egan watch has been set aside for the winner of the nitrate of soda contest, and two shields will be awarded, one to the high school and one to the graded school that has done the best all around club work during the year. Last year, Creeds and Charity schools carried home these worthwhile trophies.

Recognition at Richmond

Among the more outstanding accomplishments of the county clubs during the past year was the recognition gained at the Virginia State Fair, when innumerable ribbons and $157 in cash were bestowed on Princess Anne boys and girls. Seventy-five exhibits, including potatoes, sweet potatoes, garden baskets and poultry were carried to Richmond by the 126 boys and girls who made the trip, and many returned with a generous share of awards. Prizes included several firsts in poultry, first on garden baskets, first on Porto Rico and Nancy Hall sweet potatoes and sweepstakes prize on sweet potato exhibit; first in open (Continued on Page Eight)

Extensive Report On Progress Available To State Legislators

Results of Exhaustive Research Into Every Phase of Life in Old Dominion Will Be Valuable in Formulation of Future Laws, Board Believes.

The most extensive work ever written on Virginia, in which is assembled the record of Virginia's progress since records have been kept by local, state or federal agencies, will be made available to all members of the Virginia General Assembly on December 1 by its author—The Virginia State Planning Board. It represents eighteen months of exhaustive research by 19 volunteer committees whose reports have been absorbed by its consultant-director, his staff, and moulded into a composite picture of Virginia's progress. The head of virtually every state department and of every statewide organization has cooperated to turn over to the Board all recorded data it has accumulated on its specific field of work. For the first time in the history of the state an effort has been made to merge this material and interrelate it and thus present a picture of the state and its needs which has never before been possible.

RYE ADJUSTMENT PLAN EXPLAINED

New Program Will Run For Four Years; Only Grain Producers Eligible.

High lights of the new rye adjustment program, as outlined by H. W. Ozlin, county agent, this week, present the following interesting information.

The program will run for four full years, from 1936 to 1939 inclusive. Cooperating producers will receive adjustment payments on their farm allotments, which are to be thirty per cent of their base production. The payments are made on thirty per cent of the base instead of fifty-four per cent, as in wheat, because only about thirty per cent of the rye crop is used for domestic human consumption and that is the portion of the crop on which the processing tax is levied. The processing tax is thirty cents per bushel.

See 35 Cent Payment

In general, the adjustment payments will be the average difference between the farm price and the parity price, if this does not exceed 35 cents a bushel. (Continued on Page Eight)

BIRTHS SURPASS COUNTY DEATHS

October's Report Shows Absence of Serious Diseases In Princess Anne.

Births in Princess Anne county last month were in excess of reported deaths, Dr. Josiah Leake, county health officer, announced this week. Only a few minor diseases have been reported in this and Norfolk counties, the statement continued, with practically none of the more virulent types in evidence.

Several instances of typhoid fever were reported in one section of Norfolk county, but the disease was controlled and all cases have now been released from supervision.

Here in Princess Anne, there were 13 deaths reported and 32 births. There were 10 white male births, eight white females, six colored males and eight colored females. Of the deaths, two were white males, six white females and three each of colored males and females.

Norfolk county statistics show 42 births and 22 deaths. Of births reported, whites were evenly divided with eight male babies and eight females. Colored males stood at 17, with 19 colored females.

with scores of charts, maps and graphs prepared by the Board's corps of engineers and draftsmen. Hundreds of pages of text describe the composition of Virginia's population, the products of her soil and the agricultural pursuits of her people. A volume tells of her forests and her forestry problems and other volumes deal with public health, her industries and her educational facilities.

All of these subjects and many others are covered exhaustively, after months of study of every available record and after special surveys have been made where records failed to reveal information which was essential to obtain a true picture of state development. Virginia's transportation situation and her highways have been recorded and although these subjects have been treated separately they have been interrelated with all phases of Virginia life, so that a volume devoted to the recreational facilities of the state takes into consideration the forests, the game and fisheries, the restocking of Virginia's streams, location of her shrines and her transportation.

FIRST FOX HUNT NEXT THURSDAY

Phillips and Johnson to Handle Hounds; Goff Tourney at Cavalier Club.

The first hunt of the season for Virginia Beach will be held here on the morning of Thanksgiving Day, with the Tidewater hounds under the direction of Jeff Phillips, master of hounds of the Hampton Hunt Club, and K. C. Johnson, master of hounds of the Princess Anne Hunt Club, it was learned this week. More than 75 hunts will be on hand for the hunt.

Following the staging of the hunt, a Tidewater Fox Hunters' Dinner and Ball will be held in the Hunt Room of the Cavalier Hotel. It is expected that both events will be widely patronized by local sportsmen. Five outside clubs have made arrangements for their members to participate.

The committee on hunting is composed of K. C. Johnson, Major Paul Kearn, Miss Antoinette Darde and Mrs. Fontaine M. Thraves. The committee on entertainment lists Lee Powell, Thomas Johnson, George G. Lee and Oscar Smith.

It also was learned at the Cavalier Hotel that a Thanksgiving open tournament will be staged over the Cavalier Country Club course, with Al Houghton serving as golf host for the day. Mr. Houghton will bring down for the competition a representative group of golfers from Washington, D. C.

Local voters are warned that unless poll taxes are paid by December 9 of this year they will be unable to vote in the Town election.

Heading the list of election contests next year in Virginia Beach is the Town election, scheduled for June 9, 1936. Chief interest in the contest will centre around the election or reelection of three councilmen.

Local voters are warned that unless poll taxes are paid by December 9 of this year they will be unable to vote in the Town election.

According to law, a six-month period must elapse between such payment and the date of voting.

CHRIS SCHNEIDER TALKS OF HAPPY WANDERINGS IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Maestro of the Hot Dog Tells Interesting Tales of Seven Weeks' Trip.

Vienna is gay, but the gaiety cannot cover the poverty that still stalks the streets of the Austrian capital, nor can it hide the fear that lingers on as an aftermath of the Dolphuss assassination. In Budapest, each tavern has its gay singers, but Hungary too knows the pinch of want. Germany still applauds the name of her beloved Hitler and prays for peace, while the country engages in a remarkable building program. Switzerland is cold, on the verge of an early winter.

Such are but a few of the observations given to us over our glass of beer by our own Chris Schneider, genial proprietor of a hot-dog-and-hamburg shop that is known far and wide. For Chris has just returned from a seven-week jaunt abroad, to the old country to visit brothers and sisters and grown-up nieces that were but "so big" when last he

INTENSIVE DRIVE TO BE MADE BY RED CROSS AIDES

Workers Seek 100 Per Cent Enrollment Among Virginia Beach Residents.

Safety Campaign in Homes Stressed During Week.

Swinging into another week of intensive campaigning, the Red Cross Roll Call will concentrate upon Virginia Beach between now and Thanksgiving Day with a view of enrolling every household under the one hundred per cent banner. Workers will call upon every house open during the winter, and residents are requested to have their donations ready for those who are serving in this humanitarian cause.

Those directing the campaign have urged the workers to continue their calls both night and day, making whatever repeat visits may be necessary in order to contact the residents. The need for greater funds than were collected last year makes imperative the securing of every available dollar in the community, and to such a successful end the efforts of all are directed.

County Campaign Continues

In the meantime, the campaign throughout the county is not being neglected, with the same sort of intensive efforts being put forth by those in charge of the many districts. Princess Anne responded very satisfactorily last year, and it is the hope of the county organization that this year's campaign will show a marked increase over the total collected in the last membership drive.

During the present week, the Junior Red Cross Roll Call has been conducted. Schools, both white and colored, will bring their campaign to a close today, and although no reports were available last night, there is every indication that the children will be enrolling. (Continued on Page Five)

Value Of County Farms Reduced Fifty Per Cent In Five Years; Potato Acreage Almost Doubled

Irish Potato Production Stands At New High Level In County

Over One Million Bushels Harvested Last Year; Corn Acreage Reduced; Hogs and Cattle Increase Over Numbers Reported Five Years Ago.

With an increase of 2,685 acres since 1929, the potato acreage in Princess Anne county has expanded 74 per cent, according to figures for the 1935 Farm Census released yesterday. Over one million bushels of Irish potatoes were harvested in 1934 from 6,338 acres, while in 1929, 446,856 bushels were harvested from 9,794 acres and produced 9,290 tons.

Princess Anne county's 1,277 farms had a total valuation, including land and buildings, of $85,665 in 1934, according to figures released yesterday in the preliminary report of the Farm Census. This figure contrasts with the $9,128,675 valuation set on the 1,180 farms which were reported in 1929.

Thus, in the five-year period ended January 1 of this year, the average value per farm decreased from $7,736 to $3,983, or a shrinkage of $3,753, approximately 50 per cent. The average value per acre showed a similar decrease, dropping from $101.37 to $55.52.

Total Farm Land Increased

All lands increased from 90,050 acres to 91,601 in the same period, although the average acreage per farm shrank an approximate five acres, from 76.3 to 71.7 acres.

MANY ROBBERIES REPORTED HERE

HOLIDAY BREAKS SCHOOL ROUTINE

Home of Mrs. Grace Hurdle Ross, in Bird Neck Point, Last to Be Entered.

An epidemic of petty robberies that has assailed the outer reaches of the Beach community since the closing of the season in September burst out anew this week with the attempted rifling of the Bird Neck Point home of Mrs. Grace Hurdle Ross. However, the robber's interest in food cost him a splendid bit of loot.

Mrs. Ross returned home unexpectedly from a hunting trip to Canada and, as she started to open the front door of her home, she heard someone inside running up the stairs. Living alone, she ordinarily goes armed, but it so happened that on this occasion she had no weapon with her. Instead of investigating then, she hurried to Virginia Beach's police headquarters and reported that someone was in her house.

Rubber Flees

A State police officer hastened to the scene, but the robber had fled, leaving his intended loot piled in the middle of the kitchen floor. Freshly opened cans and a partially-eaten meal revealed that the intruder had been enjoying himself when interrupted by Mrs. Ross' arrival.

State Police Sergeant C. L. Maynard and F. P. Flynn of the Norfolk police headquarters were summoned and Sheriff Charles Carmine of Elizabeth City, N. C., brought a bloodhound to the scene in an effort to trace the robber. The dog took a trail, but the officers were unable to locate the suspect. Finger prints were found within the house.

This attempted robbery was the fourth time that Mrs. Ross' house has been entered during her two years of residence on Bird Neck Point. Other houses entered during recent weeks include the Tumbleton, Robert Pritchard, Frank Gill, Bernard Wooten, Miss Lee Parks and Mrs. Wright properties in the same area. Three other cottages in Rudee Heights also were entered, according to information received in this office.

School Heads Commended

For the part played by the county schools in the recent Junior League convention and Parent Teacher congress in Norfolk, Mr. Cox and his associates this week received commendation from Dr. W. T. Thanksgiving Recess Begins Wednesday: Teachers To Attend Conference.

County and Town schools will close next Wednesday afternoon for the Thanksgiving holiday, reopening Monday morning at the usual hour. Superintendent of Schools F. W. Cox announced yesterday. During the recess period, many teachers of the local school system will journey to Richmond to attend the annual State Educational Conference, which opens Tuesday afternoon with a meeting of school superintendents.

Mr. Cox and Miss Louise Luxford, elementary supervisor, will leave Princess Anne early in the week for the preliminary sessions, and they will be followed by the teaching corps' representatives on Wednesday afternoon. The meetings for teachers will begin with a session Wednesday night, continuing through Saturday morning. Thursday afternoon, the conference will recess in order that the representatives may take in the local football games.

Education Week Successful

According to Mr. Cox, this year's National Education Week's program was the most successful ever staged in the county. Open house was held in all schools throughout the week, and the countywide meeting last Friday night in Ocean High School served as a fitting climax to a series of programs in which the parents of students were given the opportunity to familiarize themselves with the work of the modern school.

The address by Dr. John E. Martin, president of the Virginia Education Association, was both inspiring and timely in its observations on the work of the modern school. An approximate 500 persons were on hand for the meeting, all of whom followed the program, in which the several schools of the county participated, with interest and approval.

Woodland Acreage Increased

County woodland not pastured jumped from 18,360 acres to 22,933 acres, a considerable portion of which has been given over to the reforestation program. All other land in the farms decreased from 7,458 acres to 6,165.

Summing up, in spite of the many changes explained above, land available for crops in Princess Anne county remains at approximately the same acreage as five years ago, with a reported figure for last year of 55,718 acres. This figure includes all harvested, fallow, idle, fallow and plowable pasture.

"THE VOICE OF A MAJORITY," swaying the course of government does not insure good government except it be the voice of a well-informed and well-intentioned people."

REMEMBER THE RED CROSS

Next Thursday, the nation will pause in its work of economic recovery to survey the efforts of past months and to give thanks for what has been accomplished. Such a gesture at this time is most appropriate.

But, on a thousand fronts, working each and every day of the year, the Red Cross will carry on, fighting the battle against disease, against poverty and in the interests of safety on the road and in the home. These faithful ministers will not forget, and they must not be forgotten.

The annual membership drive in Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach nears its climax. Within the week, the campaign will be ended and the results tabulated. Many have already contributed generously, but many more dollars must be collected before a reasonable total is assured.

Do your bit, we ask, and so have one more satisfaction with which to approach the season of thanksgiving. To shirk your duty, small as it may be, may well mean that someone will be overlooked during the coming year by those charged with relief.

It is not too much to ask that every adult member of this county be registered on the local rolls. Remember, if you will, that charity of this nature is twice blessed, for it blesses him who gives and him who takes.

WHAT OF THE POSTOFFICE?

It is about time, we believe, to ask a pertinent question of those who carry the political fortunes of Princess Anne county on their shoulders:

What has happened to the announced plans for Virginia Beach's new postoffice?

There are ugly rumors, unfounded as yet, that a definite move has been made to forestall its building by men high in local political circles. The game of politics is such that the opposition of such men, unless countered by a definite mass movement on the part of all other citizens, could easily eliminate the proposed Federal building now or at any other time.

The lack of interest that they show in the proffered governmental grant to the Town suggests that rumor may not be far from truth. We hesitate to accuse them of such smallness and, when proof to the contrary is offered us, we shall be pleased to acknowledge the fallacy of our reasoning.

The Hon. Colgate Darden, according to press reports, appeared in Washington within the past week to urge immediate action on the remodeling of Norfolk's Old Customs House postoffice quarters. Within several days, bids on the project were advertised. There was no word that he would or did speak for our building, despite the fact that representative citizens of the town, with the best interests of the community at heart, have asked him for such support.

When the present governmental spending spree is over and the nation begins the gigantic task of balancing its budget, there will be no hope for postoffice buildings in politically-unimportant Virginia Beach. That building must be had now. Therefore, those who handle our political fortunes must speak now, or assume the responsibility for the loss of a badly needed structure.

CONSTRUCTIVE FARM TRAINING

The approach of the annual 4-H Club Achievement Day in Princess Anne county brings to mind one of the greatest factors looking to the improvement of farm life that ever has been devised in this or any other country. The impetus which the movement has given to a closer study of scientific agriculture on the part of those who till the soil and to the betterment of rural home life is to be seen in the quickened interest which the average farm home shows in common farm problems and in the improved conditions of living which now generally prevail in rural areas.

Many a son and daughter have served as missionaries of enlightenment in carrying home a new doctrine of farming procedure, their very enthusiasm kindling a responsive note in those to whom agriculture was no more than a routine sowing and reaping of staple crops according to tradition and wholly free of change. No phase of agriculture has been forgotten by those who lead the future farmers' movement, and practical application of proven procedure, rather than untried theory, has been the order of the day.

Witness the interest shown in this county by the boys and girls of school age in the breeding of better flocks, the improvement of cattle and hogs, the growing of better fruits, vegetables and grains. Observe the ease with which many of these youngsters discuss the proper food mixtures for the farm animals, the relative merits of fertilizers and what crops to plant here and why such should be planted. And, observing such things, there comes to us some understanding of what this movement has done both for those who reside on the farm and for those who seek their improved produce.

It is but natural that such an awakened interest in the possibilities of the soil and those things associated with it should bring a higher personal valuation of farm life to him who comes in contact with the movement. The unwaranted and frequently misguided exodus of farm boys and girls into the city—where life seemed easier, more interesting and more suggestive of gain—has been checked, and the attractions of one phase of life do not lose when in comparison with others.

One of the greatest factors in this revaluation of farm living lies in the introduction of labor-saving devices and the creation of city comforts in thinly populated areas. As in the matters of improved crop and cattle production, so in the establishment of improved living conditions has the 4-H Club been a vital factor. Boys and girls have learned the value of cooperation and, though there may be some who sigh for the good old days when the farmer was a true individualist, even while sitting in the midst of his poverty, few there are who would welcome the return of former unplanned and disorganized farming.

The 4-H Club movement has proven of such unusual merit that there is little likelihood of its early dissolution, but the cooperation of parents with their son and daughter members will enhance materially the results for which the organization is striving. To that end, we would urge attendance at the Achievement Day ceremonies at Ocean City tomorrow. The exhibits there to be found will speak more eloquently than these words just what is being achieved by an earnest youth intent upon improving the home and the community in which they live, and the applause and support of families and friends will add to the incentive to continue such effort through the coming years.

To an inspired organization and to those who give it meaning we would offer our sincere appreciation for past results and our wish for future greatness.

At The Water's Edge

THE OPPOSING ECONOMIES

In an era of undoubted economic change, when theories fly thick and fast and prophets are to be counted by the score, two basic philosophies are to be discerned as dominant. The first, for many years the prevailing philosophy, is that usually classified as capitalism; the other is socialistic in its concept.

Capitalism needs little explanation. A product of the early industrial age, it is essentially an economy of exploitation, a doctrine of false scarcity in that it utilizes the means of production as a profit motive for the individual without relation to his association in a social order. Any regulation of its functions, whether by government, trade unions or any other possible authority, takes away from its first principle—the right of the individual to work out his own economic destiny without outside influence.

Thus, the system finds itself on the defensive in the United States today, where government not only seeks to regulate the means of production but actually to compete with business in spheres formerly regarded as without the pale of statehood. To exponents of capitalism, such a course means only one thing, a direct descent into the maelstrom of socialism, a word which only lately has taken on a semi respectable coloring in our land.

Demagogues and practical politicians have made political capital of this newest theory for so many years and in so many devious ways that an attempt to present a concise and brief explanation is difficult. Because we are concerned here, solely with its economic aspects, we shall define it as an economy of production for a system under which individual profits are not destroyed but curtailed, rather, in the interests of the state. The doctrine asserts that in a land such as ours each and every man must be assured the right to a decent existence if he is willing to work. It would regulate production to the point of sufficiency for all men and it would deny to any group the right to exploit less fortunate individuals.

It recognizes—as do all economic theories which strive for a middle ground between the obvious insanities of communism and the giant trust-like structure of state fascism—that the dreamer's equality of the individual, speaking from an economic point of view, is impractical and unworkable. Aggressiveness and acquisitiveness are too much part of the very makeup of humanity to dissociate from the prevailing scheme of things, but this economy of production for use does not believe profits should be made at the expense of the unfortunate and the down-trodden. These say the more level-headed leaders, are entitled to a certain economic security, though they receive no more.

It has not been our experience that those who advocate such a program place any faith in a "share-the-wealth" scheme. Statistics show that the even distribution of the wealth of America would increase the usual worker's income by a bare $100. What they seek, in truth, is the creation of more wealth—not more than the symbol of exchange, the medium of purchasing power—and they point out that, while increasing the security of the average man, the position of those who always will lead in matters economic is not hampered but actually strengthened. Only the right to amass tremendous fortunes at the expense of the worker would be denied to the present manipulators of wealth.

Those who clamor for change in the United States, first taking the precaution to point out that the course they advocate must not be confused with other ideas of a socialistic nature elsewhere proposed or practiced, argue that capitalism has shown itself unfit to bear the burden of today's existence. They present figures and statements to back up their argument.

During 1929, which many people regard as the golden year of capitalism, there were in the United States some six million families with incomes of $1000 per year or less, while another nineteen million families reached the maximum figure of $2500. For the first group, there could be little or no hope of security; nor did the second group find their position sufficiently sound to withstand the shocks of a depression which also, rightly or wrongly, has been laid at the door of capitalism.

This social-minded school of thought maintains that as capitalism cuts production to secure profits, it devours itself and impoverishes the masses. The very fact that it seeks cheap labor, they continue, cuts purchasing power and so continues poverty. Prophets of the new order run from vainer members of the New Deal's "brain trust" to the up-and-coming Farmer-Laborite Governor of the Minnesotans, Floyd Olsen. The programs they present to offset the present order are as varied as the men and women themselves.

Whether as an opportunist who sees the future trend or as one who believes in the new philosophy, President Roosevelt seeks to coordinate both schools of thought. Republicans as a unit resist his program, for the party of Hamilton has ever been the ardent defender of capitalism. The Democrats are conflicting in their opinion: the old guard of the party as dismayed as their former enemies, the Republicans; another growing group applauding his every step. The more radical of the really social and economic minded profess to see no more than ineffectual reforms forthcoming so long as the basic structure is not definitely changed.

And so the present picture is one of confusion and uncertainty, an apparent majority of the citizens believing some change is needed, but unwilling to throw off a system which has developed this nation to such an amazing extent as the past one hundred and fifty years have witnessed. The progress may have been made in spite of the system, they admit, but will not that now proposed also contain a similar amount of signal defects? They cannot view the Rooseveltian policy as one based altogether on common sense or one free of error, and they dislike to go further without some omen of what lies ahead.

We make no pretense to a gift of prophecy nor do we take to the soapbox in an effort to force or hasten change. All about us, we profess to see certain indications of change, but a return of former prosperity might just as well produce the inevitable reaction as continue present trends. It is difficult to foresee the complete abandonment of certain newly developed policies looking to the substitution of one system for another, for the "New Deal" is bright, the hope, if not the reality, of definite advances in social minded procedure.

Many of its pronouncements have failed signally in their purpose, the full extent of which history alone can tell, and many undiscovered hardships have been inflicted upon those least able to bear the burden, but progress is an inexorable thing, marching on in spite of a dubious leadership. Yet, when all is said and done, that same leadership has opened doors which never again may be fully closed.

It has not been our experience that those who advocate such a program place any faith in a "share-the-wealth" scheme. Statistics show that the even distribution of the wealth of America would increase the usual worker's income by a bare $100. What they seek, in truth, is the creation of more wealth—not more than the symbol of exchange, the medium of purchasing power—and they point out that, while increasing the security of the average man, the position of those who always will lead in matters economic is not hampered but actually strengthened. Only the right to amass tremendous fortunes at the expense of the worker would be denied to the present manipulators of wealth.

LIKE MISLETOE, THE LAST

Bitter and bright and beautiful
the bough,
Nor dark, nor dawn shall alter it,
for now

Mistletoe is the fruit of life, and high

Swings in the barren tree against the sky.

Like some green heart still beating, like a wreath
Blooming upon the bone, in icy breath

Or wind reflowering high above
the snows,

This crown and cross above its burial glows.

Winter's cathedral, druid sacrifice,
Pillared by frozen trees and lit with ice.

One poisonous flame, one symbol still remains,

The killing life that this high altar stains.

NOVEMBER INTERLUDE

Autumn that lingers on the land,
Your days of loveliness are past,
The leaves lie drifted, and the sun
Returns to Scorpio at last.

These days end early, veiled in haze.

The moon in Taurus fills this night

With lucid magic: half the earth
Sleeps softly in the spectral light.

What ghosts of summer still continue

Upon the moon-enchanted hill
Will soon be silent in the earth,

Defeated, but remembered still.

THE MOON COMES UP

At night, in its gaunt proper cycle,
The moon comes up.

Flat, speechless, lifting a tall ghost head among fires.

Slowly, slowly it sucks up the whole starred sky.

Fills the earth hollows with liquid,

Draws, draws the mountains to its fascination.

Stretches each upturned thing in to rapt immobility—

Trees changed to ivory,

Water to jade.

What is there in a moon to make the hands lift up?

To change the watcher into wor-shipper,

Who turns about three times,

Kneels, staring with mouth open but not singing,

And hears orchestral hymns?

What power has a dead satellite to conjure breath,

Rotates the body like a glass cylinder,

Electricity the skin?

Dead mirror of the daylight, look-

HOW TO HOLD THE SPEED DEMON DOWN

That was an unforgettable answer that a young Nags Head gave the court in an automobile accident case a few years ago. The evidence in the case disclosed that the young defendant was driving his automobile at a speed of 50 miles an hour over the Nags Head flats at the time of the accident—a frightful speed on the Nags Head flats.

"Why were you driving at such a speed?" the defendant was asked.

With a show of amazement, the youth replied: "Automobiles are built to go that fast, ain't they?"

There, after all, is the real underlying cause of America's terrible toll of deaths on our highways.

Technicians attribute the greater number of automobile casualties to carelessness. Ignorance and speed, but after all it is the speed of the engine of death in the hands of careless or drunken drivers that causes trouble. Automobiles are built for speed and the automobile manufacturer emphasizes speed in every advertisement of his product. Automobile advertisements scream at us: "Here is all the speed you can desire, plus rapid acceleration." And the inference is use the utmost of speed. Gasoline purveyors add to the hue and cry for speed and more speed by screaming from roadside bill boards the word GO! GO! GO!

The suggestion was made in these columns several months ago that the one certain and sure way to reduce reckless life destroying speed on our highways is to require the automobile manufacturer to put governors on his motors to hold them down to legal speed limits.

Let the manufacturer build as much surplus power and speed into his motors as he likes; the availability of surplus power and speed are highly desirable. But an inexpensive mechanical contrivance, an integral part of every automobile, could very well control the maximum of speed at which the vehicle could be operated.

Since this newspaper made that suggestion several months ago, both President Roosevelt and Dr. Miller McClintock, director of traffic research of Harvard University, have within recent weeks, voiced a similar suggestion.

"We might, for example," conjectures Dr. McClintock, "suppose that it may be possible for a motor vehicle by an electrical mechanism to signal its approach to an intersection so that a vehicle on a cross-route might know of its approach. This is already done in a degree. There might even be radio signals between all cars at intersections."

Dr. McClintock conceived the possibility of cars being equipped with photo-electric cells so that the approach of a vehicle to any person or object with which it might collide would result in a warning or actual automatic control.

Speed might be reduced automatically upon the approach to danger spots, just as trains today are automatically stopped when they enter prescribed danger zones.

"Furthermore," he added, "similar electrical apparatus is already in existence whereby, with suitable refinement, vehicles could be automatically guided around curves or past obstructions and in their own lanes."

CORN-HOG PLAN SEEKS BALANCE

Two-Year Contracts Are Prepared; Acreage to Be Cut Ten Million Acres.

Following conferences of producers, state specialists, and Washington officials, fundamental details of the new corn-hog program are already under consideration.

Since a major adjustment problem is to prevent an excessive production of hogs in 1937, a contract of more than one year's duration is necessary, it is pointed out. A two-year contract should help farmers to plan their farming operations more than one year in advance.

Strive For Balance

To maintain a balance between the production and consumption of corn and hogs during the next two years it will be necessary to (1) prevent an excessive production of corn in 1936 and 1937, (2) allow an increase in next year's pig crop that would be at least as great as it is estimated would take place were no adjustment program in effect, and (3) prevent an excessive increase in the 1937 pig crop.

The Adjustment Administration has recommended that corn production next year be limited to 95 million acres, or about 10 million fewer acres than would be likely to be harvested without adjustment. This would require an aggregate adjustment of approximately 20 percent on the part of all contract signers. Depending upon the 1936 corn crop and the demand expected next fall for the 1937 crop, a maximum aggregate corn reduction of 25 percent has been proposed for 1937.

Proposed hog adjustments are calculated to provide for a 30 percent increase in Federally inspected slaughter in 1936-37 above the slaughter expected in the present marketing year which began October 1. Hog production equal to 100 percent of the base will allow for the desired increase in hog numbers next year.

The new corn-hog contract will require that an area at least equal to the number of acres held out of corn be added to the usual acre of the farm devoted to soil-improving and erosion-preventing uses.

Make Your Letter of Application Tell and Sell

A WELL-KNOWN advertising man once said, "Anything that can be sold at all can be sold by the written word!" Certainly it is true that many men have been able to take the first, all-important step in "selling" themselves to an employer by a well-written letter of application.

The point is to make your letter both tell and sell. Put yourself in the employer's place. "Who are you? What have you done? What can you do that leads you to believe the man you want to hire will consider you qualified?" These are the things that interest the employer and that you must have clear in your own mind before you write your letter.

Remember that you are asking the employer to hire your services.

The more fact you can put in a job doesn't interest him. You must convince him that the deal will be advantageous from his point of view.

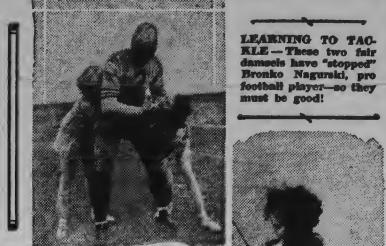

Be sure that your letter is neatly written, for your own appearance and other characteristics will be judged just as much as they would be by the manner in which you presented yourself for a personal interview.

An enclosed, stamped, self-addressed envelope makes it easy for your employer to reply, giving you an instant answer.

It is evident of your ability to pay yourself in the other fellow's place, and many great businesses have been built on the ability of those doing them to put themselves in the place of the prospective buyers and figure out what it is they really need.

By Ernest Hemingway

A Review by Paul M. Kendall, Fellow in English, University of Virginia.

Death again stalks in the afternoon for Ernest Hemingway, but this time among the green hills of Africa instead of on the sandy floor of a Spanish arena. In this rapid narrative of a month's big game hunting, Ernest Hemingway pungently and strongly evokes the emotions of the chase as in "Death in the Afternoon" he celebrated the technique of the matador. Also like the previous volume, "Green Hills of Africa" is compact of many matters other than the avowed subject at hand. It contains Hemingway's ideas about writers and the writing craft, about politics and war and man's place in the universe.

"That's a hell of a literary anecdote," Pop said. "Who's Joyce?" "Wonderful guy," I said. "Wrote Ulysses."

"Homer wrote Ulysses," Pop said.

Many of his observations are not so good humor. The New York clique of writers he calls "all angelworms in a bottle, trying to derive knowledge and nourishment from their own contact and from the bottle." And he pays Gertrude Stein back in the same bitter coin she tendered him in "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas."

Though there are many characters in the book, Ernest himself is the only one who really counts. "Green Hills of Africa" is not a book about big game hunting so much as it is a book about Ernest Hemingway, who at the time of writing happens to be on a shooting expedition. In addition to his skins and skulls he has brought out of Africa a narrative full of coarse, hearty talk, full of the sights and smells of that land in which he stalked game at dawn, rested or read in the jungle-shade at noon heat, and talked of all manner of things in the evening.

"Green Hills of Africa" is a successful book because the author has accomplished the task he set himself. Yet it neither increases nor diminishes his stature as a writer. Ernest Hemingway has brought to his subject vigorous narrative skill, the rhythmic staccato of his dialogue, and all the point and nervous energy of his descriptive prose. Still, however well it is done, the account of a month's African shooting is too slight fare for a writer who, in rank and in influence, is one of the really significant American prose artists. It is time that Mr. Hemingway was creating another novel.

Probably the "best hated" man in the newspaper world was Frank A. Munsey, for his habit of buying up newspapers and putting the staffs in the street. Deeply idiosyncratic, his personal biases were even allowed to interfere with business interests, yet, from an almost penniless beginning in New York, he amassed a fortune that made him a power in the realms of finance. He had the virtues of an Horatio Alger hero and the attendant success, but no one really cared for Munsey. After an enviable life, his final gesture was to remember in his will the woman who refused him (whether out of affection or to impress her with what she had missed no one knows) and to leave to the Metropolitan Museum the bulk of his fortune, not because he had an appreciation for art, but because the Museum was reputed to get one hundred cents' worth for a dollar. "Forty Years—Forty Millions" is the career of this peculiar personality as admirably told by George Britt.

At the beginning of the 19th century an Italian patriot dreamed of an united Italy, and lived to see his dream realized by his foes. The aspirations of this man unsettled the affairs of Southern Europe: Metternich, the Austrian Machiavelli, feared him; and his own followers often distrusted him. To those who have followed the writings that sang the praises of the Risorgimento—who are interested in stories of human effort thwarted by the perversity of fate—"Mazzini," Stringfellow, Barr's "portrait of a patriot" is to be recommended without stint.

"Vachel Lindsay" is a biography written by a poet who, pausing in his writing to admire Lindsay's work, pays tribute to his brother poet. None who has chanted to himself the drum-rhythmic song of the Congo, "The Virginians Are Coming Again," or the poem of Daniel, can deny the rugged greatness of the man who wandered from town to town earning his bread with his recitations. And Edgar Lee Masters' biography is worthy of the figure it portrays.

Stone Age Pottery Found
The oldest type of pottery ever made in Ireland was discovered in a great stone cairn at Dunloy, Irish Free State, announced Queen's University excavators in a recent report. It dates from the late Stone Age. The cairn also yielded perfect flint arrowheads, stone beads and polished stone axes. The discoveries will enable archaeologists to obtain a more complete picture of the life of prehistoric Ireland than has hitherto been possible.

INTENSIVE DRIVE WILL BE MADE

Inspection Campaign On

In connection with the annual drive for funds, the Red Cross this week conducted its home inspection campaign. More than one-third of all fatal accidents, it has been pointed out, and nearly half of all accidental injuries are sustained in and about the home. Last year, as an example, there were 34,500 lives lost in the homes of the United States; approximately 150,000 people were maimed for life, and injuries were sustained by nearly 5,000,000 others.

Seeking to eliminate such figures in the coming year, all school children carried back to their homes this week an inspection sheet requesting parents to check their houses for such accident hazards as were outlined in the blank. When such inspection was completed, the blank was signed and returned to the school.

Hazards Outlined

Parents and children were requested specifically to look out for the following hazards:

1. Stairways and steps are kept clear, repaired, lighted; porches and balconies have secured railings; toys and utensils are properly stored; a step ladder is available; a fire escape is available.

2. Safety matches are used, kept out of the reach of children; bonfires are prohibited, fireplaces screened; utensils filled with hot liquids are kept away from small children.

3. The garage door or windows are kept open when the motor is running; gas appliances are kept in good condition, the gas shut off entirely if equipment is defective until repairs can be made.

4. Medicines are stored in clearly labeled containers, necessary poisons stored out of the reach of children; food should be removed from tin cans promptly after opening.

5. Electric cords and appliances are kept in good condition; touching two conductors of electric current (light fixture and water faucet) at the same time is avoided.

6. Sharp and piercing instruments and broken glass are used carefully or disposed of promptly. Immediate attention is given to all wounds.

Those charged with the Red Cross Roll Call in Virginia Beach are as follows:

Bird Neck Point, Mrs. Edwin Smith; Holly Drive and Lighthouse Park, Mrs. J. W. Goode and Mrs. W. P. Dickson; Cavalier Park, Mrs. G. Greene; Seatack Road, Lucy Gallop; 122nd Street through 113th Street, Mrs. E. N. MacWilliams and Miss Mary B. Lankford; 113th Street to Avenue C, Mrs. F. Dormire and Mrs. James M. Jordan, Jr.

Avenue C to Cavalier Hotel, west of the boulevard, Mrs. J. B. Withers; Avenue C to Cavalier Hotel, east of Cavalier, Mrs. W. R. N. Moss and Mrs. W. H. Wails; 40th Street to 31st Street, east of Pacific Avenue, Mrs. D. A. Rawis; 40th Street to 31st Street, west of Pacific Avenue, Mrs. Mary Ryland.

SURVEY REVEALS RESTOCKING NEED TO ADVANCE HUNTING FACILITIES

With the opening of the hunting season, the Virginia State Planning Board released figures prepared for its report on the recreational facilities of the Old Dominion, replete with maps showing the location of game in Virginia and containing a strong recommendation for the conservation and restocking of wild life in the old Dominion.

"Large game once abounded in areas from which, at the present time, they are considered as zoological specimens," the Board points out.

"In the days of the Virginia colony even bison were found in the southern tier of counties, for these animals along with bear, furnished no small part of the diet of Colonel William Byrd and his boundary survey party. Land cultivation, timbering and over-hunting have reduced wild-life population of the State in an alarming degree.

Restocking Program Urged

"A general survey of the situation seems to fairly indicate that if hunting is to be developed as a major recreational activity in the State, there is need for more intensive and extensive work in the way of restocking and in providing natural cover and feed for the various species."

"The question of cover provision may well be answered, at least in part, by the establishment of additional refuges and sanctuaries in connection with extensive forestry projects contemplated in the State. Sub-marginal land purchases may be utilized in a like manner. Refuges or sanctuaries should be so located and so supplied with water and forage as to further the natural and rapid increase of game within their confines. These refuges or sanctuaries should be of such areas that singly or in groups they provide year-round range and cover for resident game, leaving the surplus to the open hunting areas surrounding them. Sanctuaries and refuges should be surrounded by public hunting areas so that the State and its hunters may generally benefit from the State's effort.

The report of the Commission on Game and Inland Fisheries for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1932, recommended every ten miles or so throughout the State.

Non-Resident Hunters

"The total of non-resident hunters is an insignificant number when compared to the area of the State and to the relatively small portion of the land area under cultivation. Whether the falling off in the non-resident hunters is due to the absence of game or to economic distress, it seems clearly evident that Virginia is not profiting from the use of her uncultivated lands insofar as said lands may be used to encourage the development of wild life."

The State Planning Board approaches the subject of game population of the State not by counties, but by number of animals or birds killed over hundred square mile areas in the counties. Counties showing kills in recent years of more than 3,000 rabbits to each 100 square miles, include Princess Anne, Warwick and King George. Counties where more than 2,000 were killed were Floyd, Buckingham, Campbell, Nelson, Smyth, and Grayson. Kills of more than 1,000 per 100 square miles were made in the counties of Elizabeth City, Pittsylvania, Patrick, Carroll, Washington, Louis, Cumberland, Lunenburg, Giles, Pulaski, Northumberland, Middlesex, Essex, Charles City, Rappahannock, Greene, Clarke, Warren, Rockingham, Arlington and Prince William.

Chesterfield Leads State

Chesterfield led the State in number of deer killed per 100 square miles, while all counties where more than ten deer were killed in the same area were Prince George, Greensville, Surry, Charles City, and New Kent.

Only the counties of Norfolk, Nelson and Henry had kills numbering ten per 100 square miles for bears, while forty counties reported no bear killed at all, the remainder reporting only small bags. Squirrel kills in a number of instances exceeded those of rabbits, while the Opossum, the Muskrat and the Skunk seem to be among the most numerous denizens of the woodlands.

Quail lead in the number of game birds, but less than 1,000 per 100 square miles were reported from all counties except Prince George, Elizabeth City, Warwick, Pittsylvania, Carroll, Grayson, Smyth, Washington, Nelson, Bedford, Appomattox, Amherst, Campbell, Northumberland, Lancaster, King George, Richmond, Warren and Charles City.

The "kill" record is computed by averaging reports for eleven or more years.

Many Maps Included

More than 300 graphs, maps and charts are included in Volume six, which deals with education and considers not only the school experience in the past and present, but also points to facts gathered from present population trends, land use programs, forestry developments and transportation improvements of the present as factors in the planning of county and city school locations for the future and the development of the Virginia school system along lines of economy and efficiency.

This volume is an excellent example of the exhaustive way in which the State Planning Board has undertaken to unearth all facts before attempting to arrive at a conclusion. The location of every public school in the state has been recorded, the number of rooms and the number of pupils attending each school has been tabulated, the area served by each school is known and a record has been made of the number of families within the school area. Even the capacity of every room in every school in the state has been determined and present birth records analyzed to determine the school room needs a few years hence. Each county has been studied as a unit and compared with other counties. The cost of school buildings by counties and cities, the assessed value in relation to the value of school properties and the problems and costs of transporting children to the public schools is all developed for the information of those who will plan the public schools of the future. Even the names of every school in Virginia is a part of the education report.

Water Resources Considered

What has been done in the field of education has also been developed in connection with the water resources of the state, her agriculture, her trade and natural resources, while the section on industry goes into every industrial line and develops even the sources of the raw materials used in the industry and considers future sources in relation to the natural resources of the state. Records for every line of trade are being compiled to show markets, transportation needs of the industry, man power employed and attention has been paid to the labor requirements of the manufacturer and other employment offering itself in the community, should the industry have a seasonal peak, or due to its nature, fail to furnish year-round employment to its personnel.

COLDER WEATHER AIDS BUSINESS

Wearing Apparel, Holiday Buying Show Heaviest Demand in Nation's Markets.

The cold snap that struck scattered areas of the country last week resulted in a brisk pickup in retail trade, but in many sections, including the East and South, unusually warm weather continues to have a depressing effect, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from more than 30 of the leading commercial regions of the country. Wholesale lines reacted accordingly, with continued heavy demand for wearing apparel and holiday items. Reports referred to the blacking of reserve buying power that is expected to bear down heavily on retail stocks with the advent of cold weather.

In many regions holiday buying was in progress in addition to generous purchasing of better quality goods in staple lines. Notwithstanding the delayed pace of Winter business, in most instances the volume was running ahead of a year ago. Department store sales throughout the United States in October were 6% ahead of the same month last year, while in small towns and rural areas general merchandise sales were 17% greater than October a year ago and 31% ahead of the 1933 monthly employment gains.

Reports indicated WPA projects were absorbing thousands of additional employables in all sections of the country and that private industrial expansions were also making increased demands on the unemployed rolls. This was particularly true of the industrial centers of Detroit, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, but also extended to the Pacific Coast. A strong up-swing in the woolen textile industry was reported, with unfilled orders for woven piece goods having been estimated at 43,575,000 yards. In the woolen center of Lawrence, Mass., the monthly payroll increased from $900,000 in October 1934 to $1,733,000 last month while the city's payroll lists increased by 10,032 workers in the same period and relief families were reduced from 1,044 to 434. Cotton mills also set a faster pace in October, having consumed 552,187 bales of lint and 67,106 of linters, compared with 449,126 and 61,127 during September.

Depression Cost Estimated

Figures by experts in the Department of Commerce on national income placed the depression cost to the people of the United States at $26,631,000,000, the huge sum being equivalent to an annual salary of $2,663 for 10,000,000 men. From a record high of $81,034,000,000 in 1929, income slumped to $39,545,000,000 in 1932 but rose to $48,561,000,000 last year. Agricultural income showed the largest decline from 1929 to 1932 and the largest relative improvement since 1932, having gained 91% from 1932 to 1934, while manufacturing gained 74%, according to the survey. Atlanta reported that all but $400,000 of the $3,253,000 loaned Georgia farmers this year through the Production Credit Association had been paid back.

While building activity throughout the country has entered the seasonal slack period, the value of permits continued far ahead of the comparable 1934 period. In October residential building was 203% higher than in 1934 and as a result of cheaper money rates, building is expected to more than double next year.

Education Programs Presented By Group

The Junior League of the Court House School helped to observe National Education Week by giving several programs and inviting people of the community to visit the classrooms.

Students in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades gave a program on Tuesday on the subject, "The School and the Citizen." On Friday, the second grade was in charge of the program, entitled, "Education and the Hope of the Nation." Wednesday's program was given over to the reports of those Junior League members who had attended the State convention.

Interesting descriptions were given by those who participated in the tour of historic Virginia communities.

MEAL OF THE MONTH

By MARIE GIFFORD
Armour Food Economist

OUR newest idea for using ground beef is a Bacon and Chopped Beef Grill, truly a dish which will vie with any filet mignon.

Ground beef has possibilities in the menu beyond your fondest dreams. Housewives often disregard the fact that chuck, flank and round steaks actually have a more delicious beef flavor than some of the more costly cuts. It is a matter of cooking them to make them deliciously brown and tender. Grinding and adding bacon beef tender until it can be broiled or roasted just like the choicest meat cuts. It is that delicately brown, broiled or baked flavor that you like so well in a rib roast or sirloin steak and you get just that flavor in your properly prepared ground meat.

Ground chuck is mixed with a little fresh pork or chopped bacon (or both) and just enough evaporated milk to moisten slightly. It should be mixed very lightly to avoid packing the meat, then shape into small steaks for broiling. The finishing touch is to serve these steaks with carefully broiled strips of bacon which add their own delicate smoked meat flavor, and for variety, we sliced a pineapple and tomato garnish.

Arrange pineapple slices which have been broiled with butter and browned quickly in the broiler or frying pan in the center of the platter. Place a thick slice of fresh tomato, then a pineapple slice and garnish with a sprig of parsley. Arrange the chopped beef steaks and bacon around the edge.

Cream of pea soup, savory beets, baked potatoes, asparagus tip salad and orange chiffon pie are suggested to round out the Meal of the Month.

Back Bay

Mrs Mildred Dudley, who is attending William & Mary College, spent the weekend here at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Dudley.

Mrs. W. H. Halstead is very ill at her home here.

The residents of Back Bay are treated to a regular automobile show on Sunday afternoon, now that the gunning season has started, as many sportsmen from the northern cities drive to their club house in large beautiful motor cars. It is hoped that the District Road Supervisor will attempt to keep our roads in passable condition this winter.

Credits High School has been closed during the past week due to several cases of diphtheria having developed. All the teachers are in quarantine at the home of Mrs. P. W. Ackiss at Back Bay, where they board.

The Arlington Hotel, which is usually considered to be open to members of the Baptist Church, is being rented this year by Mrs. J. H. Griffith, formerly of Raleigh, N. C., and is being run as a commercial hotel. Many guests are finding it delightful there this winter, as the building is steam heated, and Mrs. Griffith is offering exceptionally low rates for the winter month.

The body of the man that washed ashore and was found and buried by Coast Guardsmen at False Cape last Tuesday was taken up Saturday and identified by Mrs. Charles F. Taylor, of Washington, as her husband who disappeared on October 26th, after wiring her from Norfolk to meet him at the Washington dock the next morning. A man's clothes were found in a steamer trunk that morning, but no trace of Mr. Taylor was found until yesterday when Walter Gallup, of Virginia Beach, drove Mrs. Taylor and her daughter to station number 165 where the body was definitely identified.

Members of the Association of Surgeons of the Norfolk & Western Railway, with their families, spent Thursday at Virginia Beach and Cape Henry. The party, consisting of about 350, came by special Norfolk & Western train direct to Virginia Beach, where they spent several hours sightseeing. They left at one o'clock for Cape Henry where the visitors enjoyed an oyster roast. Dr. J. A. Noblin and his two sons, Stuart and Chandler, from East Radford were very outspoken about the wonderful growth and improvements at Virginia Beach since they were here last. Virginia Beach's possibilities are unlimited, said Dr. Noblin.

Major Ashburn was the first person to answer the annual Roll Call of the local American Red Cross Chapter. A check to cover his membership for the year 1925-26 sent in anticipation of the membership drive which formally opened Armistice Day, was received Wednesday morning by local Chapter officials.

"It gives me pleasure," the Mayor stated in a letter accompanying the check, "to tender you herewith my annual membership fee, and to know that through it I am doing my part in the work of helping thousands of unfortunate people."

W. L. Whitehurst of this county won the damage suit against the Norfolk & Southern Railway Monday when the Supreme Court refused the company a writ of error which it had applied for. The case was brought for damages done Mr. Whitehurst when a car load of 307 barrels of spinach was delayed one day. The Circuit Court of Princess Anne County gave the verdict of $311.97 to Mr. Whitehurst last September.

An event of great interest took place in Washington, D. C., on Monday, November 2, when Miss Agnes Bruce Fenestrant of Cornick Manor, Princess Anne County, became the bride of Mr. Henry Thomas Cornick, of Winchester, Va., formerly of Princess Anne County. The couple had known each other from childhood having lived on adjoining estates, planned the affair with the utmost secrecy and it was not until they had met in Winchester and traveled to Washington where the ceremony was performed, that their closest friends were aware of their intentions. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George Washington Fenestrant, while the groom is the son of the Rev. John Cornick, rector of the Eastern Shore Chapel at Oceana.

FACTORY WAGES KEEP STEP WITH PRICE OF FOODS

Survey Reveals Decreased Budgets Have Not Interfered With Food Costs.

During the past eight years, according to L. H. Bean, economic adviser of the AAA, earnings per worker employed in factories have fluctuated with changes in the level of retail food prices. Both fell nearly 40 percent between 1928 and the early part of 1933. Earnings per employed worker advanced nearly 38 percent between March 1933 and August 1935, and food prices have also.

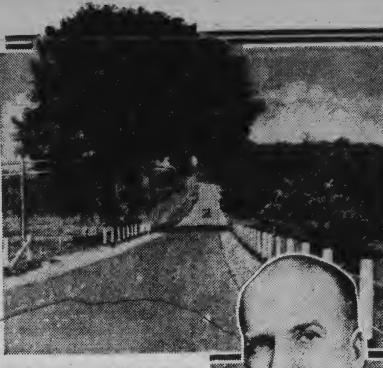

The average employed factory worker has been able, as a result of this close correspondence between his earnings and the cost of his food bill, to buy as much food during every year of this depression, including 1933, 1934 and 1935, as he could in 1928. In fact, a closer examination of the facts shows that food prices have been somewhat lower during the years 1931-1935 in relation to 1928 prices than were earnings per employed person, so that actually the average earnings in every one of the past five years have had a purchasing power in terms of food at retail prices somewhat greater than in 1928. In August 1935, retail food prices were 80 percent and earnings per employed person were 83 percent of the 1928 level, indicating that the average factory worker could buy about 3 percent more food in 1928.

Non-Food Costs

In contrast to the average worker's ability during the course of the depression and recovery since 1931 to buy as much or more food with his earnings than he could in 1928, says Dr. Bean, is the fact that his living costs other than foods did not decline in step with his reduced earnings. By the spring of 1933 when both earnings and food prices were down only 20 percent, and his ability to buy industrial goods and pay for his rent and other non-food items were only three-fourths as great as in 1928.

Since the spring of 1933, these non-food costs have remained practically unchanged at about 83 percent of the 1928 level, and now

Motor Highways Not Clinics For Nerve-Shocked Drivers

THE roads of Ontario are not going to be used as nerve clinics for upset drivers, according to Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways. In promulgating regulations suspending for 30 days driving license of any motorist involved in a fatal highway accident in the province, he said that the order was given by department inspectors before the license is renewed. The order applies whether or not court action results from the accident. Where there is court action, the suspension will remain in effect until a court decision has been handed down. The order is suspended for 30 days to allow the driver to be relieved by such a driver renders him unfit to drive for some time. Ontario's roads are not to be nerve clinics for upset drivers. It may be a good cure for the driver, but it is dangerous to the public." The photographs show a typical motor highway in Ontario and, inset, Hon. T. B. McQuesten.

FISH SALADS FOR FALL

Smart Dishes at Small Costs

FRIDAY Fish Day is becoming passe. Food events tell us that any day is fish day because fish are pleasing to the palate, builders-uppers to the body and kind to the pocket-book. If however, you like to cook a fish dinner Friday night dinner, see that you save fish in various ways on other days of the week.

Are you making the most of fish salads? In these days of low cost of living in general, fish salads have found a very definite place in the menu. Salmon and tuna fish have long been popular salad dishes, and recently the wave of enthusiasm for mackerel has called to the attention of fish lovers that it, too, is good in salads.

Stepping Out Salads:

Crab and lobster put fish salads into a party class, because we so often meet these two fish when we are "stepping out." There is no reason to think of them exclusively for entertaining, however. If you like to eat in houses and mix them plentifully with other foods—celery, cucumber, radishes—and serve them in a delicious jellied salad, you will find that your dinner salad has not seriously jolted your diet.

Among the new salads which will soon be old favorites, we recommend the following:

Crab Flakes in Tomato Jelly

Force the contents of a No. 2 can of tomatoes through a sieve. Add one teaspoonful of mayonnaise, one teaspoon sugar, and two drops of Worcester sauce. Heat to boiling and soften one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons cold water. Pour the dressing in the hot tomato juice. Cool and when beginning to stiffen, add the contents of one 6-ounce can of crab meat, two tablespoons lemon juice and one tablespoon chopped sweet pickle. Mold and when stiff and

This serves eight persons.
Lunchroom Tuna Fish Salad: Boil one and one-half cups of dried pasta and one cup dried beans until tender. Add three-fourth cup diced celery and three-fourth cup diced canned string beans. Marinate all in French dressing for at least one hour. Add romaine lettuce to a large can of flaked fish, mixing lightly. Moisten with mayonnaise. This serves eight persons.
Cucumbers Go Well With These Salads: Use the contents of one large can of salmon. Boil three-fourth cup vinegar, twelve whole cloves, twelve peppercorns, six allspice berries and one-eighth teaspoon salt for two minutes. Pour over overcooked salmon and drain for several hours. Drain and serve cold in cucumber boats, or on lettuce garnished with sliced cucumbers.

Lobster Salad in Gelée: Dissolve one package of lemon gelatin in one and three-fourth cups boiling water. Cool and let it get as thick as possible. Add one-half cup mayonnaise, the contents of one 6-ounce can of lobster which has been shredded, one-half cup of diced celery (the last two steps may be omitted if French dressing is for one hour). Cool for several hours in molds in the refrigerator. Serve on crisp lettuce with a garnish of sliced cucumber and radishes in French dressing. This serves eight persons.

BOYS INITIATED INTO FFA GROUP IN ATTENDANCE OCEANA HIGHEST

Oceana Chapter Stages Ceremony in Agricultural Building for Green Hands.

The annual initiation ceremony was performed by the Oceana Chapter of the Future Farmers of America last Wednesday night in the Agricultural building. Ten members, known as green hands, were taken into the chapter, the candidates passing successfully the requirements established by the national organization. These requirements state that each candidate shall be enrolled in the study of vocational agriculture and shall conduct at least two projects during the year. Character and attitude also were considered in their selection for the honor of membership.

Successful green hands are George Broughton, Richard James, Leroy Bishop, Frank Malbon, Jack Malbon, Knox Garrett, Alvin Neiman, Bernard Smith, Jesse Faircloth and Noah Smith. All of these boys, it is understood, will conduct at least three projects during the next year and compete for other FFA honors.

The candidates were reviewed on their knowledge of the FFA creed and other information concerning the organization by Edward Padon, president of the chapter. W. H. McCann, advisor to the club, presented the applicants with pins of membership.

To Present Operetta

An operetta, "The Land of Make-Believe," will be presented by the Junior League of the Bayside School next Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock. Parents and friends of the children have been invited to attend. A small admission will be charged.

School Leads County For October; Creeds Ahead in Individual Honors.

Leading the eight county schools with a percentage of 96.69, Oceana School stood highest in October attendance records. It was learned this week at the county superintendent's office, Creeds was not far behind the leader with a percentage of 96.56. Other schools reported attendance as follows: Charity, 95.95; Court House, 94.45; Bayside, 93.87; W. T. Cooke, 93.75; Kempville, 92.07, and Blackwater, 91.

Tenth grade of Creeds School, taught by Mr. Williams, placed first in individual room attendance with a splendid record of 99.31. Second and third honors also went to Creeds. Miss Scott's eighth grade reporting a percentage of 98.7 and Miss Bane's second grade close behind with 98.18. The eighth grade of Oceana, taught by Miss Saunders, came fourth with a percentage of 97.9, and the following home rooms classified in the first ten rank: second grade, Court House, taught by Miss woodhouse, 97.78; seventh grade, Charity, taught by Miss Butler, 97.73; grade one, Oceana, taught by Miss Bryant, 97.72; fourth grade, Oceana, taught by Miss Brinkley, 97.67; seventh grade, Oceana, taught by Mrs. Willer, 97.58; and ninth grade, Oceana, taught by Miss Saunders, 97.5.

Lively interest in the establishment of perfect records is reported from most of the schools, with each room striving to reach the top for the present month.

THE EDUCATION OF YOUR CHILDREN

Is there anything more important than the proper education of your children? Could there be any greater disaster to our national life than would come from a sudden and drastic cutting of all public school budgets? Say to an extent that would deprive 1,641,000 boys and girls (possibly including yours) of the opportunity for any education whatever?

Can you afford to remain idle and silent in the face of such a possibility? Or will you join the millions of citizens who are today awakening to a very real and pressing threat to the future of our public educational institutions.

Such a threat lurks in the possibility of government ownership and operation of the nation's railroads which now contribute to public education (in the form of taxes) more than a half million dollars a day during the average school year. Government owned and operated industries pay no taxes. If, and when, the government takes over the country's rail carriers, either every public school budget in the nation will have to cut to the bone or you will have to help bear an additional tax burden of at least one hundred and fifty millions of dollars a year—the amount of total railway taxes that annually go into the school budgets of the nation.

Within a recent year, the Norfolk and Western Railway—your railroad—contributed more than four million dollars, or 50 percent of its total taxes, toward the support of your public schools—taxes that paid for the schooling of more than 45,000 children—your boys and girls.

Despite these known facts there are those who would turn the railroads over to the government—and thereby jeopardize the entire educational structure of the country. Their activities and propaganda constitute a real threat to the proper and complete education of your children. The time has come to face this threat squarely; to fight for the right of every boy and girl to the useful lives that result from adequate schooling.

Government ownership of railroads can be effected only by Congressional action; by the vote of your representatives in congress. Their vote on any measure reflects, to a large extent, the views of their constituents; your views. That places full responsibility for the solution of this problem upon every citizen; upon you. Therefore, if you are opposed to government ownership of railroads, you must express, vigorously and repeatedly, your opposition. You must demand that your representatives in Congress actively oppose and vote against it or elect representatives who will recognize the danger to public education in government ownership and operation of one of the nation's greatest industries. And you must act promptly.

difference is greater than 35 cents, the payments for 1936 will be at least 35 cents per bushel, and may be higher if funds are available.

Any farmer who harvested rye as grain in at least one of the three years, 1930, 1931 or 1932, or who harvested rye as grain in any two of the three years, 1933, 1934 and 1935, is eligible to sign a contract. Farmers who grew rye every year will have a somewhat higher acreage allotment than those who missed some years.

Signers' Agreement

Signers agree that they will allow to mature for harvest as grain, only 75 per cent of their base acreage in any contract year. They may plant as much acreage as they wish, but the adjustment is made on the harvested acreage.

The base acreage will be figured on the six years, 1930 to 1935 inclusive. These six years are divided into two three-year periods. The first of these is known as the standard base period and is the one upon which most farmers' base acreage will be determined. The second period is known as the new base period, and it will be the period upon which growers, who harvested little or no rye in the first period, will have their allotments established.

Operetta Offered On Tuesday Night

"Spring Glow," an operetta for children, will be presented by the students of Willoughby T. Cooke School next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock, under Parent-Teacher sponsorship.

Mrs. Robert Taylor is general chairman of the entertainment group, assisted by Mrs. Jack Talisferro, Mrs. Willard Ashburn, Mrs. Landon Hilliard, Mrs. Henry Norfleet, Mrs. Richard Bugg and Mrs. Henley Moore.

The operetta is composed of three acts, and the cast of characters includes Spring, Jack Frost, Bluebird, Flower Maidens, Frost Elves, Pussy Willows, Raindrops, Bees, Brownies, Fairies, Butterflies and Breezes.

CHRIS SCHNEIDER TALKS OF TRIP

(Continued from Page One) Switzerland, where snow already falls on the mountain peaks, to Havre and its bustling port across the North Sea and, finally, back to the States. The old world became very real as he talked, and the geography lesson was as graphic as it was interesting.

Chris missed a trip to Paris because of a prolonged dinner engagement, but he enjoyed Hamburg and the trip through south Germany revealed an untold wealth of beauty. He visited the opera, and the variety of languages that came from the rear of the opera house — English, French, Hungarian, Italian, German — reminded him of New York where the same tongues are heard on every street corner.

Good Press Agent

And everywhere he extolled the beauties of Virginia Beach. "I told them all about this place," he said, "and some will come here too." His own brother, a prosperous jeweler in Vienna, will retire soon, and Virginia Beach will know him as a visitor. Others may never leave their native land, but they have heard the story of our own beautiful seashore.

A thrilling experience on the outward trip will never be forgotten. Near the Irish coast, an SOS was picked up from a disabled Danish freighter, adrift in a stormy sea because of the loss of navigation aids. His own boat hurried to her rescue, guided her through rough water for more than a day and one-half, until the English coast was sighted and two tugs dispatched to bring her into a safe haven. Chris enjoyed that experience, as he enjoyed each minute of his eventful trip.

Wine Good and Cheap

Wine was good—and cheap—in Central Europe, for the grape harvest was a splendid one and the resulting wine superior. Lots of drinking everywhere, but no drunks—how Chris must have recalled certain Saturday and Sunday nights in his shop in far-off Virginia Beach as he sat sipping his wine in some little Budapest cafe!

He's home again, but he's going back maybe next fall. "And maybe you'll go with me, too," he noted gaily, as we finished yet another bottle and regrettably took ourselves back to an everyday routine. We had enjoyed our imaginative trip to the walled city on the Danube!

Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, seen as father and son in "O'Shaughnessy's Boy," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's stirring drama of the devotion of a circus animal-trainer for a son who scorbs him, will be the feature attraction Wednesday and Thursday, November 27 and 28 at the Bayne Theatre. Little Spanky McFarland, of "Our Gang" fame, plays Jackie as a tiny tot.

Little copycats wear leather coats

Two-to-eight year old brother and sister have duplicated big sister's three-quarter length leather coat. The small version is made of the same pig grain with roomy slash pockets, half-belt, and the identical notched lapels with collar that stands up for cold weather. What'll these youngsters copy next?

Attend some church and Sunday School this Sunday.

Truck Report Not Ready

This report of selected crops harvested in the county excludes fruits, vegetables and the various annual legumes, which will be considered in the next report of the Farm Census Bureau. Truck crops are an important part of the agriculture of this county, but the figures have not yet been tabulated.

In the livestock report, it is noted that hogs and pigs increased from 5,856 to 9,203. Cattle, too, increased, jumping from 2,856 head in 1929 to 4,231 last year. Cows and heifers two years old and over were recorded as 2,975 last year, as against 2,042 five years ago. Sheep and lambs were reduced almost fifty per cent, dropping in the five-year period from a total of 4,263 to 2,392.

While horses and colts were decreasing, mules and mule colts showed some increase. Horses in the country were listed in 1929 at 1,935 and last year at 2,765. Last year, there were 1,670 mules reported on the farms, an increase of 134 over 1929.

The entire village of Weierhof, Germany, is to be placed on sale by the public receiver. A few years ago the 40 persons in the district, who make their living by weaving, formed a cooperative society. The officials abandoned, leaving debts of $50,000. Creditors have obtained a court order for the sale of all land, houses and goods in the village.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE CAMPAIGN BEGINS FRIDAY; $616 IS NEEDED

President Roosevelt Issues Proclamation Asking National Support.

IS URGED TO CONTRIBUTE

All Money to Be Spent Locally
In Eliminating Dreaded Plague.

"On Thanksgiving Day will again be launched throughout the country the annual Christmas Seal sale of the National Tuberculosis Association for funds with which to continue the fight against tuberculosis. The appeal deserves the serious consideration of everyone, for the disease continues to be the Nation's foremost public health problem—especially among the young. It is imperative that protective measures which have been found effective in preventing further spread of the disease shall be continued unabated."

"Leadership in the work of carrying out these protective measures is given by the National Tuberculosis Association and its two thousand affiliated units throughout the country. Their work has been of special value during the past five years when Federal, State and municipal administrations were extended to the limit in caring for those who turned to them for aid."

"The cooperation of every man, woman and child, every organized group and every government official is needed in order to bring this dread disease under control. It is properly the duty of each loyal community to raise the funds for its own protection. Christmas seals give everyone an opportunity to do his part. The funds are spent in the communities in which they are raised for the protection of all."

"(Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Local Goal is $616

For the first time since the Christmas seal sale began in 1910, a goal has been set for each county and city of the State, which must be realized if Virginia is to reach its quota of $75,813 assigned by the National Tuberculosis Association to this State. Princess Anne's quota is $816.

The local campaign, organized under general county chairman, Mrs. Rufus Parks, will get underway Friday morning, and no stone will be left unturned in an effort to surpass the quota set for the county. Last year, $601.86 was raised in Princess Anne by the sale of seals, and every cent has been expended in the relief or alleviation of the dreaded white plague.

Notable Accomplishments

Among the many accomplishments made possible by the contributions from local sources might be listed the following:

Chest, tuberculin and x-ray clinics where 304 children were X-rays for 93 positive and suspicious cases, examined by chest specialists.

Auxiliary's Bridge Benefit Successful

The Woman's Auxiliary, Princess Anne Medical Society, reports that over $50 was realized at the benefit card party held last week. Cod liver oil will be purchased with the funds and will be distributed to indigent children of the county through the agency of Miss Gertrude Lovell, county nurse.

Officers of the auxiliary have requested this opportunity to express their appreciation to the merchants and patrons of the card party, all of whom through their generous support contributed to its success. The members were delighted with the response of the public to their first effort.

Three door prizes and table awards were made. Tea was served by Mrs. Robert Woodhouse, president of the group.

Plea Made For Foster Parents; Children Are In Need Of Homes

Annual Effort of Richmond Bureau Seeks to Bring Happiness And Readjustment to Many of State's Youthful Un-fortunates.

The Children's Bureau of Virginia, with headquarters in Richmond, has requested the Virginia Beach NEWS to make the following appeal through its news column this week:

"Did you ever stop to think of what an adventure parenthood can be? Many are not privileged to have such an adventure. But there are many who could be foster parents, yet have never considered what an opportunity they are missing by neglecting such a privilege. One foster father, in speaking of his experience, says: 'Of course, I would not have you think it is all sunshine by any means, but to be occupied with the problems of growing youth and feel that you are being instrumental in the shaping of a child's destiny is certainly better than the depressing stillness of empty rooms no longer vibrant with the joy and mirth of growing children. To those who are now sitting in the stillness and silence of a childless home this is a plea to take on the pleasures and the joy of helping a homeless child.'

Worthwhile Responsibility

"But," you may say, "these neglected and so-called 'delinquent' children present so many problems and bad habits I could never take such a responsibility."

Of course, it is a responsibility. Worth while undertakings always carry responsibilities! But the joy you can gain for yourself, not to mention the joy and training you can give a child who would otherwise lack both, make it more than worth while.

Oceana's Stunt Best

Oceana, presenting its stunt in the form of a play entitled Wheels of Progress, gave the best entertainment of the day, a novel, highly original and interesting performance. The stunts, together with the more than 200 exhibits brought to the meeting by the club members, ranked high among the interesting aspects of the day's program.

Of the 200 or more exhibits, 22 were corn, 16 Irish potatoes, 26 sweet potatoes, 25 garden products, 25 livestock and 8 poultry. A. L. Dean, poultry expert who judged the egg exhibits, stated these were the first he had ever seen in many years of judging 4-H Club competitions. L. C. Beamer, vegetable specialist, the other judge, was equally high in his praise of the assembled products.

Distribution of awards and prize money, made by H. W. Ozlin, county agent, included $190 in cash. Of this amount, $157 was secured as a result of participation in the Virginia State Fair at Richmond this fall. Other awards follow:

HISTORIC RELICS ARE DISPLAYED BY SOCIETY IN RICHMOND SHRINE

The Virginia Historical Society

in Richmond, for which more than a hundred years has been engaged in collecting the historic treasures of Virginia, has recently taken its place as one of the show places among Virginia's historic shrines, through the completion of the furnishing of its fireproof addition.

numbers to see its treasures, which now may be displayed for the first time. Among them is a gallery of famous portraits, seven of which are by Charles Wilson Peale, nine by Thomas Sully, three by Wollaston, some by Robert Sully, and others by Chester Harding, Bridges, Guillaumet, Martin, and Myers. Approximately sixty portraits of Virginians and a number of miniatures are included.

Items to be exhibited will

the present time the exhibition includes the bell which was in St.

John's Church and rung to call

Patrick Henry made his "liberty or death" speech. Robert A. Lan-

refers to it as the first liberty bell,

"for the speech was the match which fired the Revolution."

Other relics are riding boots of Lord Fairfax, a Lewis and Clark rifle, and other historic guns, swords and pistols, many pieces of

another room hundreds of original

accumulated by the Society, are being filed and many may be seen for the first time in generations.

Visitors from every state and

Society's headquarters this year and for the first time were able to inspect its possessions, which have been taken out of vaults and other

its own new fireproof building.

Enabling Act Passed

An enabling act permitting city and town councils to zone their territories was passed by the State legislature last year. It is under the terms of that act that the local group will function, determining which districts are strictly residential, which may be used for business purposes and what type of business will be permitted.

The group will sit with William Crockett, chairman of the council's streets committee, and Don Calcott, engineer. It is expected that the commission will meet in the near future to begin the work with which it is charged.

BULLET WOUND IS FATAL TO YOUTH

County Boy Dies From Injury Inflicted While Practicing on Range.

LeRoy Virginia Whitehead, 12-year-old son of Ernest S. and Rosa Buck Whitehead, who was wounded in the stomach by a bullet from a .22 caliber rifle while engaged in target practice near his home on the Broad Creek road last Friday afternoon, died at St. Vincent's Hospital, in Norfolk, last Saturday night. Just how the accident occurred could not be learned in detail.

Beside his parents, the boy is survived by four sisters. Mrs. Andrew Mancos and the Misses Vivian, Florence, and Margaret Whitehead; four brothers, Ernest J. Gerald, Steven L. and Tilden Whitehead, the last named of Honolulu; his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Luke Whitehead, and his great grandfather, Robert L. Sherman, all of this section.

The body was taken to the Holman-Brown Funeral Home, where funeral services were conducted last Monday afternoon by the Rev. M. E. Travers, rector of the Kempsville Episcopal Church. Burial was in Riverside Memorial Park.

State Highway Work Outlined For The New Year By Engineer

Approximately $55,000 to Be Spent; Discrepancy in Funds Given to This and Norfolk Counties Draws Supervisors' Fire.

Reporting that a total of $54,447.89 of Federal and State money was spent on the roads in Princess Anne county during the fiscal year ended July 1 last, State Engineer Haggard, in charge of road construction for the highway department in the county, this week told the board of supervisors that a similar amount would be expended in conditioning and surfacing county roads in the secondary highway system during the present year.

Additional funds for the continued construction of farm-to-market outlets may be forthcoming under requested WPA contributions.

Funds spent last year, exclusive

costs, were $3,990 for emergency extra help and $4,500 for materials. WPSO, a road-building agency of the Federal government, has contributed an additional $14,600, and WPA, also a Federal unit, another $14,400, to be used specifically for the development of farm-to-market roads.

Work included in this year's budget, which embraces several projects already completed, lists the following roads: Indian Creek, Blackwater, Providence, Muddy Creek, Holland Swamp, Morris Neck, Mapleton, Salem, Seatuck and Lynnhaven. Streets in Cavalier Park will be conditioned, and the West Neck and Broad Bay bridges will be given extensive overhauls.

It is anticipated that the bridge

COUNTY'S BOARD REFUSES ACTION ON HOSPITALS' PLEA FOR FUNDS

Request Referred to New Set-up; $1620 Asked For the Coming Year.

OZLIN IS REAPPOINTED AS COUNTY FARM AGENT

Home Demonstration Worker Selected; to Assume Job at First of Year.

Charges of temporizing to delay a recorded vote and of a lack of sympathy for the indigent of the county were hurled at the board of supervisors last Monday by David Fender, Winder Harris and Dr. J. E. Martin, representing the association of Norfolk hospitals.

The men appeared before the board to urge the appropriation of sufficient funds to insure proper treatment of Princess Anne's non-paying patients in the Norfolk hospitals, and the lack of cooperation shown by the supervisors roused the indignation of the solicitors.

Basing their estimates of needed revenue for the coming year upon the number of local patients handled during the past six months, the delegation asked for an appropriation of $1620, one dollar for each day spent by a county resident in one of the operating hospitals.

$1620 was appropriated six months ago for this hospitalization work, but the members of the board, voicing their opinions through George Dawley, William Hudgings and M. C. Mansfield, this week replied that any further action must be taken by the new board, which will hold its organization meeting early in January.

Spirited Plea Made

The Norfolk men made a spirited plea for the appropriation, pointing out that, although each patient admitted for treatment costs the hospital an average of $5 per day, only $1 was sought from this county.

"THE VOICE of a majority, awaying the course of government does not insure good government except it be the voice of a well-informed and well-intentioned people."

ACTION, PLEASE

Virginia Beach's proposed postage office did not reach official sanction in the usual way. Our Congressman, Colgate Darden, did not advocate it; no local politicians or groups of citizens appeared in Washington in its behalf. So far as local knowledge of it was concerned, it just happened. Actually, it was included in the building appropriation as a result of a survey of needed postoffice buildings made by a postal inspector.

The announcement of the project caused considerable surprise, but none was more surprised than those who shake the "big stick" over this section. For reasons of their own, the threatened building did not appeal to some few of these leaders, and they have made no effort to hasten or even to insure construction. Whether they have made any definite attempts to block its building, we do not know, and we are unwilling to rumor that they have taken such a course. Yet, it is not impossible.

It is our thought that whatever the sentiments of these men may be, Mr. Darden owes it to his constituents in Virginia Beach and in Princess Anne county to follow the dictates of the majority and to press for further action, as he did in the case of the Norfolk Customs House remodeling. That Virginia Beach needs such a Federal building is readily apparent, and, if he is acting in good faith, he will no longer delay in announcing his support.

As Mayor of this community, Roy Smith stands as the logical leader to press for decisive action. The sewage disposal plant and yacht basin project that he has urged upon the government work relief agency have not been assured as yet, and, unless he throws his whole weight and influence behind the postoffice movement, we may stand to lose every vestige of governmental building assistance here. His voice may not be as great as Mr. Darden's, but as Mayor of Virginia Beach he is pledged to support those moves best designed to improve this Town.

If the county organization, headed by Floyd Kellam, really is interested in doing something for a district that has given more than generous support to its candidates, it, too, will conclude its silence and go to bat for the building. If these men continue their do-nothing policy, they must assume full responsibility for the loss of the postoffice. Such an absence of interest on their part may, we warn, be reflected in the next local election contest.

The Town Council can do more than maintain a policy of neutrality in this fight, for what is rightfully ours. It has funds to send delegates here and there for other less valuable purposes, and it can carry the fight of the people directly to Washington, if it is ready to do its duty.

Then, the issue is: the people versus a few self-seeking politicians. The action of those enumerated above will determine which side of the controversy they are prepared to take. We shall await their decisions with considerable interest.

VIRGINIA BEACH NEWS, WEDNESDAY, NOV. 27, 1935

At The Water's Edge

FOR THESE THINGS ARE WE THANKFUL . . .

We have been chided many times of late for our policy of criticizing those who control the Democratic Party, nationally, in the state and locally, with the same vigor brought to our attacks upon the Party's enemies. We would submit, therefore, a brief statement as to our position.

The Virginia Beach News believes wholeheartedly in the basic principles of Democracy. It believes that the Democratic Party and its platform represent the truest way of achieving a real Democracy, for, as we understand it, that party has been most active through all the years in continuing that essential liberty of the individual upon which our Constitution was founded.

It does not believe that simply because a man seeking office tags himself with a Democratic label he is deserving of our support.

Charlatans and demagogues appear in a variety of clothing and mumble a variety of creeds, and our support can be given only to him who strives for principle and not for principle.

This newspaper does not believe that the election of Franklin Roosevelt to the Presidency gave him license to slide away from the platform on which he was elected and still retain Democratic support.

It is willing to applaud many of his executive actions, the while it challenges militantly his lapses from the Democratic dogma and his misguided habit of reckless spending.

It can support with sincere pleasure the candidacy of the Hon. Carter Glass, yet look with skepticism upon many of the policies of the junior senator. It can, and does, pledge allegiance to James M. Price in his gubernatorial campaign, though the regular organization fights him to the death. It can support actively certain local officials, but deny support to others who are animated by something other than a belief in Democracy.

It maintains, in brief, the right to vigorous independent thought and action, insofar as such thought and action are consistent with Democratic ideals. Its support cannot be purchased, and the support given to that position by peoples of all races and creeds bespeaks a greater concerned peaceable position than has ever before been recorded in modern history.

HOSPITALIZATION AND THE SUPERVISORS

Although technically, the outgoing members of the county board of supervisors may have been correct in their refusal to appropriate funds to the Norfolk hospitals for the care of Princess Anne's indigent, it strikes us that a much more suitable gesture would have been made had these men gone on record as favoring such action by the new board.

Personally, we believe they would have been within their rights had they made an appropriation for the first six months of the year.

However much this county is now spending on public welfare, the need of suitable hospitalization facilities cannot be denied.

Approving such by word is not enough; the action to back up such statements must be made before sufficient proof of the members' intentions is given to the public.

Without such facilities as are offered in Norfolk, this county would be in a perplexing situation.

We agree that undoubtedly some few undeserving patients are getting free hospitalization which is paid for by the county, but these few must not be permitted to take from the many deserving a human right which is truly theirs.

If such practice would be eliminated in the future, we suggest the appointment of a welfare worker, such trained person to determine which cases are applicable for free hospitalization and which should be made to pay the nominal hospital fee. So long as determination is left in the hands of the individual physicians, however good their intentions, such injustice is certain to continue.

Such a note of tolerance is more evident among the masses than among the present rulers, that is all the more reason to value its permanence and its effectiveness. Men may legislate from now until doomsday, but unless their legislation carries the stamp of popular endorsement it is quite impossible of enforcement. A "new deal" in the consideration of our fellows would be the greatest achievement of our age.

FIGHTING THE WHITE PLAGUE

Recovery has not progressed so far that this Thanksgiving Day will find two chickens in every pot, but the outlook of the average man is brighter today than was the case last year. Private industry still lags behind in the matter of reemployment and the governmental deficit reaches new heights because of its relief activities, yet it can be said honestly that we are better off this Thanksgiving Day than we were in 1934.

Gradually, out of the fog of theory and experiment, a course of practical conduct on the part of our government seems to be evolving. Confidence in the future had bounded upward, and though many inequalities of procedure still remain to be worked out, long-time planning on the part of industry has supplanted the fearful day-by-day operations of but a short time ago. The application of the rule of common sense will continue our present development.

Our optimism as regards things economic may not be wholly justified, but it is our belief that the desert has been crossed and that fertile fields lie ahead.

Reports indicate that the past lean years have brought about an increase of tuberculosis in the county. Funds are needed to carry on the necessary work of relief. The Tuberculosis Association depends entirely upon voluntary support for its existence, conducting its services to the extent of what have given to the Red Cross. Our duty to our fellow man will not be completed until we have purchased our allotment of Christmas seals. You may save a life by your contribution. Let it be said that you were found wanting in a simple gesture of helpfulness and hope to those less fortunate than yourself.

Poetry

NO OTHER SONG

As from half-truths best epigrams are hewn,
The contour of the truth
Being so round, so excellent, so smooth
Can make no more of it:
As masters, knowing it beyond
To catch the shadowless radiance
Of high noon,
Seem more to prize
The slant-lit, half-way hours,
Barred earth and binded skies:
So must half-loves, thwarted and Transient, be
The tinder and the spark of Poetry;
For love fulfilled, love durable,
Deep and strong,
Tells its own tale, and yields no other song.

MOTION PICTURE SHOW

Can this, the world we see today, be real?
Oh, sleeper, turn and dream a dream more true
To faith in God's design and man-hood's due
Than this shrill fever-phantasy of steel

With men too rushed to think, too massed to feel!
Could Life deprive so many, bless so few?

Our lives are but a shadowplay that you Never fear never our wakening will heal.

And now when music drowns the silumand din,
Evokes a world not destitutionracked,

I know, while Something Greater looms and years.

The curtain that is consciousness grown thin,

The silver screen on which our passions act

The photoplays from which the Spirit learns.

IDENTITY

Forever we are bondmen to the past.

Not flesh nor spirit can we claim our own.

Seed of our dreams by Angelo was sown—

And Alexander. Dead hands hold us fast.

Today we triumph because David cast

Against Goliath's shield a conquering stone:

We fall because some beggar stole a bone,

Because Napoleon lost his crown at last.

We are the past—each one of us an urn

Wherein the essence of the years is poured.

You bow before Mahomet's shrine and turn

To wash the wounded feet of a

GOOD NEW DAYS

The "good old days" have received another staggering blow in a new book entitled "America Strikes Back." The author, Gustavus Myers, heard and read the statements of many critics of modern times who claimed that the craftsman of the Middle Ages produced quality while the workman today, pressed by mass production methods, turned out poor stuff in quantity.

Mr. Myers was skeptical. He read to the records. He read a lot of musty old volumes and found that many laws had been passed centuries ago regulating the work of goldsmiths, weavers, watchmakers, and so on. It seems that those people tricked the public often enough to make protective legislation necessary. They adulterated materials; they covered poor workmanship by veneer; they even exported watches without their full quota of works. Food dealers in those days knew how to falsify weights and measures.

Mr. Myers concluded that medieval humanity had no more pride in its jobs and skills than present day humanity. The shoddy stuff of the old days went to pieces soon and so was not let for posterity to observe. The good stuff lasted, and built up the guild craftsman's reputation for universal good quality.

These revelations ought to encourage the search for truth and facts behind other accepted beliefs about the past. The good new days deserve better publicity.—Portsmouth Star.

FRIENDLINESS OF COUNTRY NEIGHBORS

An unusual tribute to the friendliness of country people is given by a gifted city woman who moved with her husband far out into the country and entered into the production of genuinely artistic pottery. We quote it from "The Progressive Farmer":

"The thing that makes me content and supremely happy in my world in the backwoods is the friendliness of my country neighbors."

"Their kindness to each other is as Christ would have it. When a farmer is too sick to plow, his neighbor does it for him. If a house is to be built, there is a 'working' and the house is completed. When there is illness or want, there is a pounding. If the illness continues, so does the pounding. My neighbors nurse each other, for a paid nurse is unknown and doctors a great luxury. They sustain and comfort each other when death stalks among them. They make the graves and bury their friends with loving hands."

"Only country folks, it seems to me, know the inner meaning of humanity. Being remotely situated, one is forced to look within for pleasures and for strength. And one can read with no interruptions. Away from the glare of street lights one can observe the moon and stars, and listen to the pines as the winds play upon them."

"These are the things I love most in the country." —Mecklenburg (N. C.) Times

ARE YOU NORMAL?

Among the conversational commonplace are the remarks "I'm funny that way" and "I guess I'm different from most folk." No doubt many people wonder about themselves — whether they are "normal," whether they are wholly sane and well-balanced. Dr. Paul Schilder of New York says there are seven questions which every normal person must be able to answer—not, be it noted, to pass muster with the psychiatrist, but to one's own satisfaction.

1. Do you think you are beautiful?
2. Do you believe you are healthy, efficient and superior?
3. Would you like to beat up your bigger companions? In other words, are you aggressive?

4. Are you masculine (if a man) or feminine (if a woman)?
5. What is your attitude toward sex and love?

6. How much money each month would make you happy? In other words, what do you expect from the future?

7. Are you afraid of death?
8. To the first question, which is perhaps the most interesting to many, it appears that you are normal if you don't worry about not being beautiful. Most of those who go for treatment do worry. Dr. Schilder says: "When we ask patients: 'Do you think you are beautiful?' or 'What do you think about your body?' they are usually embarrassed."

For most of us, the happy way of life is to look for beauty in the world outside ourselves, in the hills, the trees, the sky, the buildings, rather than to look in our own mirrors.—Judge.

FARM DEBT UNIT VALUED AGENCY

Local Office Reveals How Crippled Farmer Was Aided in Saving His Home.

Typical of the plight of many debt-ridden farmers of this region is the case of a crippled, partially-disabled owner of a small upland farm, cited by W. Kerr Scott, regional chief of the Resettlement Administration's farm debt adjustment unit.

Described as "energetic and deserving the respect of his neighbors," this distressed farmer at the beginning of the year was desperately trying to make a living for his wife and seven children. When fall came he owed the Rural Rehabilitation Corporation a substantial sum advanced to him for making a crop, and there was a past due mortgage of $350 on his home.

Crop Return Small

From the sale of his crop he realized only $150.

Unable to pay himself out and about to become homeless, he did not know which way to turn.

The story of how this self-respecting man of the soil saved his home after it actually had been sold to satisfy the mortgage and gained a new lease on life through the help of the farm debt adjustment unit was reported to Mr. Scott's office by David McPherson, a district specialist of the regional staff, and released by Homer H. Mask, Raleigh, N. C., regional director of rural resettlement for the RA, under whom the farm debt adjustment unit operates.

Home Saved

"The home of this burdened farmer already had been sold," Mr. Mask stated, "and the deed was in possession of the creditor. It was the last day on which he could redeem the property."

"That morning, Friday, at 10 o'clock, the farm debt adjustment specialist was called in. His first move was to approach the creditor and get an extension of time until Monday. He then found a $150 loan from a private source for the farmer—twelve months at 6 percent—and helped make an arrangement whereby the farmer's son agreed to work out another loan of $45 to pay for a new roof.

"Then the mortgage holder agreed to scale his claim down from $350 to $150. The farmer took the $150 he had just borrowed and paid off the mortgage and the mortgage holder took the $150 and paid a creditor who, in turn, had been pressing him. Thus, both creditors and debtors were relieved of pressing burdens and the farmer, in addition, had a new roof."

Had the farmer lost his home, Mr. Mask pointed out, he would have lost all he had put into the property in money and hard work over many years and also would have lost the opportunity the farm afforded to work himself out of his financial difficulties with the aid of the Resettlement Administration. The entire transaction took place between 10 a. m. and 7 p. m. on the day the farm debt adjustment specialist was consulted.

In that short space of a few hours the farmer, with the friendly assistance of an agent of RA, gained a new peace of mind and the assurance that his home, with a new roof overhead, was safe. He was then able to pay the $150 realized from the sale of his crop on the Rehabilitation Corp. loan and pay the taxes past due on the land to the county government.

Information about the farm debt adjustment service may be obtained from the rural resettlement supervisor in each county.

THE TALE OF GENJI

By Lady Murasaki

Houghton, Mifflin, 1135pp. $5.00

A Review by Ben Belitt, Assistant in English, University of Virginia.

"The Tale of Genji" is the product of a golden age, of which Genji is the paragon. Written almost nine and a half centuries ago by a noblewoman of the Japanese court, it remains a landmark in the literature of its country, and a gauge whereby the cultures of the world may be judged in relation to their time, and to one another. The year was 1001: the chronicles of Geoffrey and Chretien de Troyes were then a leap of almost a hundred and fifty years in the future, and the "Trollin and Crossida" of Chaucer—which most nearly resembled "Genji"—was still four hundred years away.

Then the mortgage holder agreed to scale his claim down from $350 to $150. The farmer took the $150 he had just borrowed and paid off the mortgage and the mortgage holder took the $150 and paid a creditor who, in turn, had been pressing him. Thus, both creditors and debtors were relieved of pressing burdens and the farmer, in addition, had a new roof.

And yet, during these years, on the other side of the world, Lady Murasaki was writing a novel as finished as "Tom Jones" and as urbane as "The Way of the World." It was a novel conceived in the midst of leisure such as is possible only to the community which has reached a pause in time and space, and is aware that its age is a golden one. At the court of the Mikado Akito, an etiquette of the most exacting precision of ritual held sway over a fellowship of scholars and patricians. Codes of decorum were being devised to regulate the "most trivial pursuits of daily life, taking on complexity in proportion to the delicacy of the human factor involved. Women were esteemed as valuable contributors to the literature of the nation, and played a dominant role in the pageantry of the court. All the balances were made to turn up a hair, and life moved like a ceremonial dance through a maze of intricate figures, upon whose nice observance depended the movement of the whole.

It was rather inevitable that a person so circumstanted should take the form of a novel of manners with particular emphasis on the etiquette of love. Nor is it difficult to conjecture what must have furnished the chief source of interest for readers of "The Tale of Genji" in Lady Murasaki's own day. Not for nothing is Genji made the favorite of an Emperor and the cynosure of a kingdom. Not for nothing is his skill upon the zither such that even the patriarchs who hear him are moved to despair over the vanishing

The Southern giant, Thomas Wolfe, has had a book of short stories printed. Some of the stories in "From Death to Morning" are moving, some of them are examples of involved writing from which the meaning must burst as from an enveloping cocoon. Disappointing perhaps for the author of "Look Homeward, Angel" and "Of Time and the River," but undisciplined bigness demands more than the limitation of the short story form.

Now for a truly beautiful magazine type of book, "U. S. Camera, 1935," the "L' Illustration" of modern America in the medium of a typically American art. Telling portraiture of beauty or poignant experience, shadowed scenes, exquisite compositions of still life, strong mechanical compositions that reflect the drive of the century strike from its pages. The little brother of the aristocratic lenses—the candid camera—is not neglected. It makes its contribution of human and grotesque, photos caught in a riot, the page of "Alka-Seltzer," and the repulsive "Laughing Horse." And there is work of the highly sensitized instrument that catches the marvel of each motion of a bird in flight. There is also a puzzle study included in this book — "British Novelists." The Sampler would welcome information as to who this novelist may be.

For loan of these books, apply to your local library or the Extension Division, University, Virginia.

There are No Safer Brakes Made than the Super-Safety Brakes on the 1936 Ford V-8

No other car in America has the same basic design as the Ford V-8. And because of its unique design—the Ford car could use any type of braking system now in common use.

BUT, with the whole field to choose from, Ford stands by mechanically-operated, Super-Safety brakes as the safest, surest, most positive for the Ford V-8.

This is the type of braking system used on many of America's costliest cars and on most racing cars. And because of its unique chassis design, Ford can use it to better effect than any other automobile built today.

Then, for the brakes themselves, Ford has provided more effective square inches of braking surface (186) than is found in any other low-priced car... And big, 12-inch alloy-iron drums with special cooling fins to give maximum braking power under all road conditions... All in all, no safer brakes are made than the 1936 Ford V-8.

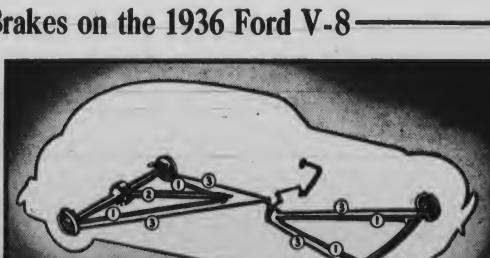

And right through the Ford V-8 for 1936, from bumper to bumper, the same attention to your safety, comfort and peace-of-mind, characterizes the whole car... Ford uses a one-piece, welded-steel body because it is safer and quieter... Ford gives you Safety Glass in every window at no extra cost because Ford believes you are the manufacturer's duty to provide for maximum safety as part of the car's sales price.

Drive the Ford V-8... Notice how it "holds the road" on curves (you never have to "fight" a Ford around turns)... Notice how dependably the brakes work on rough roads—on steep hills—or anywhere else. You can arrange to do this easily by calling:

FORD USES 4 INDEPENDENT BRAKE RODS

Rods [1] brace the front axle to the front wheel. Rods [2] brace the rear axle to the rear wheel. This means that the front and rear axles of a Ford car are always held equidistant—in perfect alignment. On this permanent wheelbase any braking system now in common use could be used. Only with this Ford-type wheelbase can mechanical, Super-Safety brakes be used to the fullest advantage.

Stuff the Turk with Oysters

By Jane Rogers

"TURK" STANDS for Turkey and Turkey stands for Thanksgiving!

At least some such simple reasoning would appear in every primer of the kitchen.

Of course, the round gobble is not the only bird that can grace the Thanksgiving board in spite of traditional die-hards who insist upon "Turkey or nothing." They don't really mean it, for another good bird which is just as many game birds—taste as good, well, almost as good—at the Thanksgiving dinner.

As much care, however, must be taken in selecting and preparing the pre-stuffed bird with bird-stuffing as is like celery without salt. There are stuffings and then more stuffings, and each has its own long-time admirers. But the ideal stuffing, we find, is the one that comes in a fashion-able foil, is the Oyster Stuffing.

The delicate seafood favor combines superbly with the fowl—he it turkey, duck or goose. And there are many men—and women, too, who like their bird nicely stuffed with Oyster Dressing. This is easily achieved by following the tested recipe:

Oyster Stuffing
4 cups fresh bread
1 cup cream juice
2 cups melted butter
1 teaspoon minced pepper
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 pint oysters

Mix bread crumbs with melted butter and seasonings and oysters. Mix well. This quantity is enough for a four-pound chicken and may be doubled for a ten-pound turkey. Those who prefer dressing with the old-fashioned "country" flavor can build around Brazil nuts, as follows:

Brazil Nut Stuffing
salt and pepper
2 cups melted butter
2 cups Brazil nuts
3 cups sliced Brazil
3 cups soft bread

Finely chop onions and cook two minutes in the butter. Mix Brazil nuts and seasoning with bread crumbs and stir into butter. Cook two minutes more, stirring frequently. If desired, add a little water. This amount of stuffing is enough for a ten-pound turkey.

Black Rayon Velvet For Evening

New York-Paris Fashions

BLACK rayon transparent velvets are smart for the evening mode this year and above are shown two models developed in this material. The straight-cutting model at the left is by Molney and features a high V front and a lowback decofication accented by a large velvet buckle back bow in contrasting color. Shirring down the center front of the skirt gives it a yoke-like effect and is another feature of this youthful classic gown.

Lucie, one of the rayon transparent Opera velvets—fashions the flatteringly youthful monk's cap shown at the right with its simple architectural lines. This chic evening wrap is stunning, not only in black, but in vivid Renaissance colors and darker tones, such as burgundy, with linings to match.

IMPROVED GAIN SEEN IN TRADE

Winter Temperature Seen As Impetus to Substantial Future Improvements.

Retail trade gained substantially last week over the previous and 1934 weeks in areas where colder weather prevailed, but in other sections winter temperature was the needed tonic for the stimulation of consumer demand, according to Department of Commerce reports from 33 leading cities of the United States. The entire business front was optimistic, however, over prospects for the best holiday volume since 1929. Since there is one less shopping day between Thanksgiving and Christmas than last year, stores have already put up holiday decorations and considerable advance gift buying was reported.

Favorable weather created more buying in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Memphis and New Orleans, while trade was still marking time in Norfolk, Charleston, and Boston. In most instances, the volume was running ahead of last year.

Considerable increases in production and exportation were reported in industrial centers. Pittsburgh reported heavy orders for steel. The Birmingham coal strike was settled and activity in coal mining regions generally was improved. Cleveland reported an estimated increase of $17,600,000 in industrial payrolls for 1935 over last year. The upswing has also affected the New England textile centers, the $14,111,529 October payroll in Rhode Island having been 8.5% greater than September and 16.2% above October last year. Industrial plants were improving their own equipment as indicated by the demands made on the machine tool industry, in which the index of orders rose from 43.9 in October 1934 to 102.9 last month.

Holiday buying was estimated at 10% to 15% greater than last year with automobiles and house furnishings being popular items as a result of free consumer spending, demand for better merchandise and expanded credit sales. The trend in buying also included increased interest in jewelry, silverware, leather goods, toys, underwear, books and stationery. Heavy automobile sales were reported in Indianapolis, Detroit and San Francisco.

Texas reported a $10,000,000 turkey crop and 1400 cars for the Thanksgiving and Christmas trade. Tennessee and Kentucky farmers were moving large burley tobacco crops to the warehouses with stronger prices in prospect. The general level of farm prices was about the same as mid-October, the rise in the prices of cotton, potatoes, dairy products and eggs having been offset by declines in grains and livestock, but the ratio of prices received to prices paid was the highest in five years.

Sales of leading chain store and mail order houses in October were 11.74% greater than last year and the nearly two billion dollars of business during the ten months of the year was 9.70% greater than the same period last year. Chain grocery sales for the ten months were 4% above the 1934 period. Despite a warm Autumn, confectionery and chocolate product sales, amounting to $61,000,000, were 7.6% larger than 1934.

Electric power output exceeded the 1934 peak for the seventh consecutive week and almost without exception, bank clearings were substantially greater than the previous and 1934 weeks.

United States exports valued at $221,215,000 in October represented an increase of 12% over September and 7% over October last year, while imports gained 17% over September to $189,240,000, leaving a favorable trade balance of $31,975,000.

October building construction in principal cities was more active than for any October since 1931, total valuation of permits having been $87,145,000, or 17.6% greater than the previous month and 78.1% above October last year.

The World's Clearing House for Toys

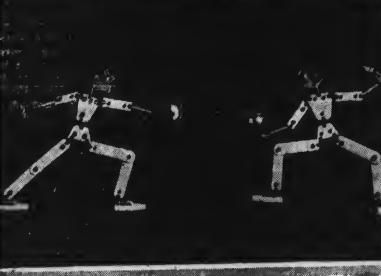

THE Christmas toys in endless variety are planned a year ahead of time. All over the world toy makers study the tastes of children large and small with intelligent sympathy. Every demand of millions of little customers is anticipated.

For over 700 years toy makers have displayed their newest wares at the Leipzig Fair. Imagine a thousand toy shops one after another filled with the most fascinating toys. It is the greatest toy show in the world and regularly attracts buyers from seventy different countries. Here one catches a glimpse of Santa Claus' workshop.

The taste in toys has often changed in the centuries. The toys of the middle ages while picturesque would have been scorned by up-to-date children of today, familiar with radio, aeroplane and other twentieth century marvels. This historic Fair, however, continues to be the great clearing house for toys which gladdest the hearts of millions of children.

The great toy show forms part of the 8,000 exhibits of every conceivable industrial product regularly displayed at Leipzig, which is attended by 180,000 business men. The toy show is housed in five of the 57 great exposition halls. At the next

Fair to be held from March 1 to 6th, millions of new toys will be shown which later will find their way to happy homes in every corner of the world, including, of course, the United States.

While an approximate $84,000 was being spent here last year, $156,000 was expended on the roads of Norfolk county. Except has been taken repeatedly to the discrimination, it being pointed out that the money set aside for this county's highway system is not sufficient to handle the necessary work on the secondary roads, without consideration of those included in the primary system.

Main Roads Neglected

As a result of the limited funds, little or no effort is made to repair the roads in the primary system, with the natural consequence that the road shoulders are in poor condition and the roads themselves in need of attention. Many other roads and streets in subdivisions, not yet embraced by the State department's network, are nearly impassable, and, since no county funds are available for their repair, they must wait until such time as the State Highway Department can see its way clear to give them treatment.

In the meantime, innumerable complaints pour in upon the board of supervisors from residents who feel that they are being neglected in the matter of road repairs. At Monday's session, as an illustration, it was urged that 145th Street, Cape Henry, be taken into the State system, that the Sigma Road be given similar treatment, and that the streets in Ocean Park not be overlooked. Those close

STATE HIGHWAY WORK OUTLINED

(Continued from Page One) over Broad Bay, now in a dangerous condition, will be replaced by a steel structure formerly used near Suffolk. The new structure will be a permanent improvement that has been needed for some time. It is, according to the engineer, a 120 foot bridge with a 60 foot draw. It is hoped that permission can be obtained from the War Department to close the draw on the present West Neck bridge, which no longer is used.

WPA funds for farm-to-market roads will be expended on the Pungo, Muddy Creek, Mansfield and Blackwater roads. It also will be used for certain drainage projects in connection with the mosquito eradication work now going forward, and for the construction of an additional two miles of new roads.

New Work to be Spotted

Although many roads in the secondary system, as listed above, will be given attention, it must not be presumed that the entire length of each road will be improved. The available money has been stretched out to cover that work most necessary at the moment, and the improvements planned will include a maximum of one mile per road, not often to be exceeded by the work of the highways department are of the opinion that unless a radical change is made in the matter of fund disbursements it will be several years before any action can be taken on most of the requests.

New High Style Fasteners

New York-Paris Fashion
A NEW style note in the latest of dressy afternoon frocks is illustrated above as a feature of this gown of black matelasse crepe, an example of the mode for smart simplicity. It is the use, at neck opening and for the side slit pocket, of the new Spectra Talon fasteners made of Pyralin, a plastic material. These fasteners are now being styled in matching or contrasting colors to fit the ensemble feeling of many of the new winter gowns. The fastener is opened in this case by small rhinestone balls which match the one on the suede bag which the model carries, the whole being topped by a stunning flat fur turban.

November's Horn of Plenty Inspired This Buffet Table

The Horn of Plenty is an old decorative feature, but always an appropriate one for the year's last surprise for the buffet supper hostess in the new light-weight "stubby" bottle for beer. Fruit, nuts, beer in tall pilsner glasses, pretzels and cheese crackers make an excellent accompaniment for cranberry sauce, cold turkey sandwiches, and cole slaw at the end of an evening.

A flat cover sets off the table service, which—candelsticks, platters, beer bottle, and all—is completely of glass.

PLEA MADE FOR FOSTER PARENTS

Hundreds of Homes Needed
The Children's Bureau of Virginia has need of hundreds of suitable foster homes and intelligent, sympathetic foster parents. There must be such homes in our proud old State. Where are they? It must be that the great need for them is not known—not recognized. Surely, if Virginians knew the multitude of homeless children in the State they would do something about it.

The Children's Bureau, State Department of Public Welfare, with offices in Richmond, will be glad to have you write for more information. If you wish to apply for a child, a representative of the Bureau will visit you and discuss the matter in detail. In this way, you are better able to get the type of child best suited for your home. Each home must be investigated and approved by certain required standards. Each child has a physical examination and is free from disease when placed. A visitor from the Bureau will help you with problems presented from time to time. And if, after a fair trial, adjustment cannot be made the child may be returned. Wouldn't you like to make an adventure as a foster parent?

Children Described

A few of the children awaiting such parents are briefly described below. There are many others.

Ned is a slender sixteen year old white lad with an engaging smile, a cooperative attitude and an ambition to make good. His step-father's home has nothing constructive to offer his sensitive nature. He wants suitable employment so that he can be financially independent but at the same time needs the love, protection and security of a wholesome home.

Rob, white, a brown-eyed youngster of fourteen is appealing and winsome. To know him is to love him. His early training was unfortunate. When he came to us at the tender age of ten years, he was well established in the habits of cursing and chewing tobacco. Today, he neither curses nor chews tobacco but is neat and well mannered. He gets good reports both at school and in the boarding home. The way in which he so manfully overcame most of his difficulties should be an example some of us grown-ups could well emulate. He is in need of a permanent foster home.

May is a plump little white girl of twelve years. She is friendly and frank and much interested in making a good school record. She likes dolls and pretty clothes. May's father deserted his family several years ago. Her mother, who is working for a small wage, can do little more than help the grandmother who takes care of May's little brother. May needs a foster home now.

Dick is a mischievous little Negro boy who has made many friends. He claims to be fifteen years old but looks and acts much younger. He will need patient training but wants to learn and will be a most interesting child with whom to work.

SCHOOL FACULTY TO OFFER PLAY

Hamilton Conley, the practical joker, is portrayed by Edward Garrett. Miss Ethyl Hill will be the wealthy Aunt Deborah. The characters of Mrs. Adams Parker and her daughter, Winnie, will be portrayed by Miss Louise Bell and Miss Juliette Croton, respectively. Carey Stanton, movie director, will be played by Nelson Eddy and Orestes Ulysse Bean, a business man, by Latane Waring. Miss Anne Herrick will take the part of Verena Lyons a country maiden.

Proceeds from the performances will be given to the orchestra fund of the school.

PRICELESS TEXAN DOCUMENTS SENT TO CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION HALL

Priceless documents of the Republic and State of Texas, their value running far into the millions, will go from the Capitol's archives in Austin to Dallas for the Texas Centennial Exposition; state officials announced.

So valuable are these historical relics that they will be conveyed from the capitol to the Exposition in armored cars, accompanied by a guard of Texas Rangers.

To Be On Exhibition

In Dallas they will be exhibited, from June to December, in the $1,200,000 Hall of State to be erected there as a permanent historical shrine. The money already has been appropriated by the legislature.

Rich in history under the flags of six nations, Texas can supply an almost limitless exhibit of this type.

There will be the Constitution of the Republic, the Constitution of the State, the latter a document unique in the nation, early Spanish-rule maps, the signatures of every viceroy of the "Kingdom of New Spain" from Antonio de Mendoza in 1535 to Juan O'Donoju in 1821, battle flags of the Texan troops at San Jacinto, treaties of the Republic with Great Britain, France, Holland and the Hanseatic League, along with countless other documents of as much interest to the general public as to the most learned historian.

Priceless Documents Involved

Tentative plans have been made too, for transferring a portion of the Garcia Library, one of the most famous collections of early Spanish and Mexican literature, from the University of Texas to Dallas for the exhibition.

One of the most rare of these Garcia exhibits is the narrative of Cabeza de Vaca.

De Vaca was leader of the first four white men to land in what is now Texas. When the expedition of Pánfilo Narváez was shipwrecked in 1528, he and his three companions made their way to what probably was Galveston Island.

His history of eight years spent in this then un-named and unbounded land was published in Zamorra, Spain, in 1542. Like the stories of Cortez and Pineda it reported the fable of the Seven Golden Cities of Cibola, where untold gold could be had for the taking. It was followed by an influx—De Soto, Coronado, Guzman, Monat and Espíñol—all came to Texas seeking gold, but returned empty-handed.

The copy in the Garcia collection is an authenticated edition of the 1542 Zamorra printing.

Declaration of Independence

Quite as authentic is the Texas Declaration of Independence, signed with the bold scrawls of men whose names have been indelibly impressed in the annals of state and nation, as they met at Washington-on-the-Brazos in March, 1836, and the Constitution

'THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE'

The county attorney in Columbus, Texas, where what the Associated Press calls "a howling cursing mob" lynched two Negroes, 15 and 18 years old, said the day afterward that "I do not call the citizens who executed the Negroes a mob. I consider their action an expression of the will of the people."

The first fact that rises from this judgment is that nobody in that mob will ever be punished in that county. The second is that the county now has—if it did not have before—a clearer idea of the kind of man it chose for county attorney and in particular what he thinks of the relative values of law and anarchy. But the third—and we are not sure it is not the most important fact—is that the county attorney has probably passed a correct judgment on his fellow citizens. The chances are that their action was an expression of the will of the people.

It is easy enough to understand that a county attorney who holds such views does not believe in law; and, given a sufficient number of people who do believe in law, it would be easy enough to get rid of him. But the point is that not only a single official is infected with the theory of private vengeance: probably a whole community is. The will of the people has prevailed. But what a picture is left of the people who make up the community!—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

No. 3—MIST AND FOG

SO LONG AS THERE IS LIGHT WE MAY SKIP AROUND AT A LIVELY RATE OVER THIS OLD CONTINUOUS LINE. WE MAKE SHORT JOURNEYS IN SURPRISING TIME. WE MAY CROSS THE CONTINENT FROM SIDE TO SIDE.

But every now and then Mother Nature decides to put us in our place, and of all her devices to make us slow down, none is more effective than mist and fog.

Now we may not have to contend with fog and mud simultaneously, but we're bound to now and then, and when we do, it can cause us a lot of annoyance and trouble.

When a good heavy fog comes—on land, as see the air—everything that moves, moves with caution. The ocean liner slows down several knots an hour. Light signals are used to indicate our position. Airlines group their planes and cancel trips. Even trains on tracks reduce their speed—and we drivers on the highways, too, must make our way cautiously through that baffling screen. For one thing is true. In spite of all our progress, transportation still depends on pairs of eyes in human heads. Scientists who have studied fog say that it is composed of tiny droplets of water. These droplets are so small and light that they hang in the air, and so close together that light can hardly get through them. Instead, these little drops act like tiny convex mirrors. When we try to pierce them with a beam of light, a great deal of it is thrown right back at us, so bright that it looks like a great, gleaming white curtain in front of us.

Experienced drivers say that the first thing to do is to get us the lights right. The main thing is to direct the beams downward. If we have them shining straight ahead, the light reflects off the road surface and blinds us. Likewise, if we have them pointing downward, the rays are reflected toward the road.

Then they say it's a good idea to guide by the road edge at our right, and when we have a spotlight on our car, to focus it right on that road edge, close to the front of the car, so the edge will be clearly lighted. But we have to keep a good weather eye ahead, too, because fog rolls more than the road. It hides not only things on the road but such things as trees, telephone poles, utility and hills and mountain sections. Even the traffic lights and green signal rays have the same hard time that our headlights do getting through that strange haze. In fact, in a good heavy fog, the best we can do for our vision is none too good. And so the main thing is to slow down. The ships have to do it, the trains have to do it, the planes have to do it. It won't make up our minds to that, they tell us the best thing we can do is to pull off the road, or if we have not yet started out, we had better just stay home.

But seeing in fog and mist is only half the story. We not only have to see, but we also have to be seen. We have to be seen, especially at night, and we have to be seen enough to do the duty in bringing us out to people coming from the opposite direction. And in addition, some drivers use their horns like foghorns by giving them a toot every now and then. But another thing we have to think of is to be sure drivers behind us see us. That means that we have to have our stop and tail-light working when we're driving in fog. And so it's a good thing to make sure that these lights are working and to wipe off those little red glasses if they happen to be covered with mud. If the weather's clear and our tail-light has gone out, the other car's lights may point us out fairly well. But if his headlights are fighting fog, they can't do much to protect us.

So, when all is said and done, driving in fog is just a matter of having our headlights and tail-lights right and being a little more careful. If we do that, we can drive our cars safely, even through Nature's stubborn obstacles of mist and fog.

Economy in Space

Built-in furniture, because of its nonportable nature, may be constructed with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the Federal Housing Administration's Modernization Credit Plan. Besides taking up a minimum of floor space, in keeping with modern simplicity in room furnishing, built-in beds, as illustrated above, provide sleeping accommodation for two when constructed in "double-decker" fashion. Such improvements may be made in bedrooms, remodeled attics, or basements, and the built-in bed fits itself admirably to a room carving out the idea of a ship's cabin or a log cabin. A built-in bed, as illustrated here, is of great convenience in a boy's room when he has a chum spending the night, or a guest from out of town.

Theater Previews

As lover and singer, Lawrence Tibbett stars in "Metropolitan," the Darryl F. Zanuck production to be presented today and tomorrow, November 29 and 30 at the Bayne Theatre. Tibbett's singing of the prologue from "Paginac" and the Toreador song from "Carmen," are highspots in the musical program. Virginia Bruce and Alice Brady are featured.

"Diamond Jim," the glittering screwplay based on the life of James Buchanan Brady, first of the super-salesmen, the man who made the gay 'nineties gay, has been booked for showing Sunday and Monday, December 1 and 2 at the Bayne Theatre. The cast, headed by Edward Arnold as "Diamond Jim," includes Jean Arthur, beautiful Binnie Barnes as "Lillian Russell," Cesar Romero, Eric Blore and Hugh O'Conor.

Fox Film's "The Gay Deception" brings dashing Francis Lederer and lovely Frances Dee together in a delightful comedy story of two people who looks for thrills, and find a glorious romance. This picture will be the feature attraction Tuesday, December 3.

"Anne Karenina," Garbo's twentieth picture for M-G-M, will be shown Wednesday and Thursday, December 4 and 5 at the Bayne Theatre. The great Swedish actress makes her appearance as the heroine of Count Leo Tolstoy's immortal romance, with a cast which includes Fredric March as co-star, Freddie Bartholomew of the memorable "David Copperfield," Maureen O'Sullivan, May Robson and Basil Rathbone.

A "Gridiron" jacket for winter sports.

Leading the field for football matches, campus wear, and outdoor sports is the "gridiron," a very smart woman's jacket made in either suede or grain leather. "Gridiron" is a new double square effect burned into laurocuede and grain leathers. The jacket has a standup collar, pockets with button flaps, regulation sleeves and full belt.

And, of course, men have gone "gridiron" too. Their suede jacket has bellow pockets with a center pleat and shirred yoke back.

SCHOOL VALUES DIFFER WIDELY

Variations in Assessment Value of Properties Revealed in State Survey.

The wide variations in the values of public school buildings in Virginia and the wide difference in the assessment value of properties as compared with the schools, is pointed out in the Education section of the report of the Virginia State Planning Board, which has been filed with Governor George C. Peery. The report contains a map, showing the assessed value of property subject to local taxation per pupil enrolled in the public schools, 1933-34. A difference running from less than $500 per pupil to more than $4,000 in some counties and more than $8,000 in the city of Hopewell, is recorded. Richmond has a per pupil taxable value of approximately $7,500, with Fredericksburg third highest with a $5,000 figure.

All the area south of Richmond except Chesterfield, Princess Anne and Prince George Counties and the county of Norfolk, and all of the remainder of Tidewater Virginia except Northampton, Warwick, James City, Henrico and New Kent Counties have assessment value of less than $2,000 per pupil enrolled. Most of Southwest Virginia, excepting only Wise, Tazwell, Wythe, Giles, Pulaski, Montgomery, and Roanoke counties have taxable values of less than $1,000. Floyd and Grayson have less than $500.

Wide Variations

Shenandoah Valley Counties all range over $1,000, with many of them having taxable values of more than $2,000. Bath County leads this area with $3,492. The Northern Virginia counties of Frederick, Clarke, Loudoun, Fauquier, Fairfax and Prince William all exceed $2,000 and Clarke, Loudoun and Fauquier exceed $3,000.

"The wide variations in the pupil-assessment ratios are worthy of attention," the board states, "showing as they do that amounts of the tax bases have little or no relation to the number of children to be served. Variations in assessments in different localities for properties of the same intrinsic values or of equally potential earning powers, are responsible for many of the inequalities in the pupil-assessment ratios, and added to this are the concentrations of the properties of industry and public service corporations in certain political sub-divisions and their absence from other localities, which is also productive of marked difference in said ratios."

Making all due allowances for differences in the opinions of the appraising authorities in this case, it is evident that there are wide variations in the standards of the county buildings. Some of these variations are due to differences in the pupil-assessment ratio but this is by no means true in all cases, because as will be shown later there are no consistent relations between the tax bases and the inventoried values of the school buildings. Probably a large number of differences in building standards arise from differences in building policies.

County school building expenditures per pupil enrolled varied greatly in the state, the lowest figure being $24 in Floyd. Those with an investment or more than $100 included Arlington, Fairfax, Northampton, Elizabeth City, Warwick, Norfolk, Henrico and Roanoke Counties. A great many of the counties had an investment less than $50 per pupil."

Roving Dental Clinic Helps Settlers

THE Canadian Red Cross Society in co-operation with the Provincial Department of Health, is bringing dental treatment to families in sparsely settled sections of Ontario where such services do not exist. The clinic, in charge of Dr. E. L. Washburn and his wife, who is a trained nurse, moves about the country as a mobile unit in a motor coach equipped as a modern dental laboratory and surgery. Children have treated as far as fifty miles for treatment, often walking as far as twelve miles.

Since the car has been in service it has traveled more than 3,000 miles among outlying communities and the records include 20,000 teeth pulled, 10,000 filled and 32,000 cleaned. Photographs show Dr. and Mrs. Washburn and exterior and interior views of the dental coach.

RESETTLEMENT OFFICE PROFFERS LOANS FOR COOPERATIVE SERVICE

Loans for rural co-operative services ranging from community laundries to pure bred sires are now available from funds of the Resettlement Administration, according to announcement from Homer H. B. Mask, regional director of the Administration's rural resettlement program.

Any group in a community in which rehabilitation clients are now being cared for in Region IV—North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky—is eligible for such a loan, where a sufficient number of families will agree to use the service and thus make it self-supporting, Mr. Mask said.

Applications Received

Approximately $500,000 has been set aside for this special activity in the five states and applications are now being received through the rural rehabilitation super-visors in each county. The applications should originate, Mr. Mask pointed out, with the groups that expect to use the services. The rural rehabilitation super-visors will furnish the proper forms.

"The community and co-operative services allocation will be used for loans to finance a wide variety of services which will provide rural folk with advantages which they, as individuals, could not secure or maintain," Mr. Mask stated. "These include such enterprises as cooperative storage houses, canneries, community laundries to do away with the drudgery of the individual family tub and wash-board; cheese plants, threshing machines, hay bailers, blacksmith shops, engine cutters, cooperative medical and dental clinics, cooperative facilities for mixing fertilizers, spraying and terracing; and numerous other services, such as the purchase of pure bred bulls, boars or rams for improving livestock, which a community can obtain working together, but which they cannot afford as individuals."

While these services can be set up only where some rehabilitation clients are included, all other growers in such communities are invited to participate. In many communities these services may not be made available without cooperation of others than rehabilitation clients, especially where establishment of the service may require large numbers of families in order to bring the cost to where it can be afforded.

George R. Ross, regional section chief of community and cooperative services, is in immediate charge of the cooperative program in Region IV. The state directors of rural resettlement are in charge of the activities of this program in their states, as follows:

Wild Game To Find Place On Many Tables This Fall

BY JULIA NORWOOD
Director Modern Science Institute,
Toledo, Ohio

HAVE you seen any male member of your family during the past few weeks busily engaged in oiling and polishing his trusty old shotgun? If you have, don't become alarmed because you can be fairly certain that he has had those thoughts in mind. He is simply getting ready for the fall hunting season.

Although the opening date for hunting rabbits and pheasants varies throughout the country, the dates of November 10th and 15th usually mark this eventful day in most of the midwestern states.

Of course, after a hunter has tramped all day through the woods and returned home with several rabbits or pheasants, he will expect his wife to exert her finest cooking skill to see that the results of his hunting ability come to the table in manner fit for a king.

Nothing dampens the enthusiasm of a hunter quite so much as to see the game he bagged, toughened by improper cooking, with the resulting loss of that delicious flavor peculiar to wild game.

If any member of your family starts checking over his hunting equipment these cold November days, perhaps you had better jot down right now, this recipe for rabbit baked in wine. You will discover that the addition of a small amount of domestic red wine (preferably Claret) will give an unusually delicious flavor to the meat.

RABBIT WITH WINE
1 Rabbit
2 cups Domestic Claret Wine
Roast the rabbit in an uncovered baking pan until almost tender. Use 400° temperature for the first 30 minutes, then reduce to 350° for remaining period. When the rabbit is nearly tender, season with salt and pepper and add 2 cups of Domestic Claret Wine and continue roasting. Baste the rabbit every ten minutes with the wine until the meat is tender. To roast a pheasant, the same method of procedure described above may be followed.
